ODE TO ST. SWITHEN.

"The rain it raineth every day."

I marvel—Why such wel, mysterious weamer.

I wish you'd clear it up?

Why cast such cruel dampers
On pretty Pic Nies, and against all wishes,
Set the seldgucks a swimming in the hamners,
And volunteer, anmask'd, to wash the dishes?
Why drive she Nymphs from the selected spot.
To cling like lady-birds around a tree—
Why spoil a Gypsey parry at their tes,
By throw ling your cold water upon hot?
A Queen you are, raining lu your own right,
Yet oh! how little flattered by report!
Even by those that seek he Court.
Pelted with every term of spleen and spite,
Folks railfand swear at you in every place;
They say you are a creature of so howe!;
They say you are a creature of so howe!;
They say you are a creature of so howe!;
They say you are a ways washing Nature's face,
And that you then supply her,
With nothing drier,
Than some old wringing cloud by way of towe!?
They whole town wants you duck'd just as you duck'd.
They who you on your own mad portige supper'd.
They hope that you may kick your own hig' tacket
Or in your water-but go souse! heels up'ard!
They are, in short, so weary of your drizzle.
They'd spill the water hig sour veins to stop it—
Be warn d! You are too partial to mizzle—
Pray deep it!
