Cannot See Red Sox

It may have been his rage at seeing Thrasher laid out that provoked Connie Mack to declare that the Red Sox do not size up as well this spring as they did last, and that they do not begin to compare with his old world's champions.

"They did not look especially good against Bush," Connie is quoted as saying, "and the only reason we lost was because of the breaks and some erratic fielding. If I had just two more pitchers to go along with Bush and Meyers I'd like to play the Red Sox every day in the week. I believe I'd beat them regularly."

The Red Sox are a great team in some respects, but are not in the same class with my old club. They have a wonderfully strong defense, where any individual on the field is liable to pull a sensational play at any moment, but their offensive power is not what it should be. They can be beaten by any club which will match, or come close to matching the pitching shown by Ruth, Shore, Leonard, Foster and May—and that's something no one could say of the Athletics of a few years ago."

To Aid Minor Leagues

Minor leagues forced to suspend before the close of the regular season will not lose their player or territorial rights, according to a ruling of the governing board of the National Association of professional baseball leagues received by President Terney of the Three I League on Friday night.

The ruling was issued by John H.
