

POOR DOCUMENT

MC 2 3 4

TWO

THE STAR, ST. JOHN, N. B., MONDAY, JANUARY 11 1909

COAL

American and Scotch Anthracite in all sizes. Reserve and Old Mines Sydney Soft Coals.

Clean coal. Prompt delivery. Reasonable prices.

R. P. & W. F. STARR, Ltd.

49 SMYTHE ST., 14 CHARLOTTE ST.

LOCAL NEWS

Trimmed hats for $1.00. 75 Germaln St., opposite Trinity Church.

To cure a headache in ten minutes use Kumfort Headache Powders, 10 cents.

The evening classes of the King's daughters' Guild will begin again next Tuesday evening.

The styles you like are here. As for the prices we can say, quality considered, our prices positively the lowest. Union Clothing Company, 25-28 Charlotte street, opposite City Market.

In the Main Street Baptist church yesterday there was introduced for the first time the juvenile choir. This choir is composed of forty or fifty of the Sunday School children, and it made a very creditable showing.

Announcement has been made that the St. Peter's Y. M. C. A. will hold their fraternal visitation evening on Tuesday next. On that evening the other societies will visit the St. Peter's at their rooms, Douglas avenue. An excellent musical programme has been arranged.

William D. Ryan, Louis McDonald, Urban Sweeney and John Casey, will leave today for St. Joseph to resume their studies at the university there. Messrs. Ryan and McDonald will complete the course of studies and graduate in June.

The Misses Kirk, of 20 High street, return their sincere thanks to the innumerable friends who extended sympathy and donated flowers in their bereavement on the death of their father, the late James Kirk.

The annual meeting of Chambers Lodge, No. 1, Royal Guardians, will be held this evening in their hall, Germain street, when officers' report, election of officers, and installation will take place. Members are requested to be present.

A horse and wagon owned by Hiram Alward and driven by his son, Judson Alward, aged 13 years, collided with a sleigh on Main street Saturday. Alward's horse took fright and ran away, but was captured on Mill street. The shaft of the wagon was broken and the horse had a severe cut on his leg. The driver escaped uninjured.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take LAXATIVE BROMO Quinine Tablets. Druggists refund money if it fails to cure. E. W. GROVE'S signature is on each box. 25c.

Before a large crowd the second race of the season was skated in the Victoria rink on Saturday evening. The contest was for a half mile, and was captured by a lad named Joyce, who traveled the distance in slightly over two minutes. The rink's business in attendance both afternoon and evening rendered excellent music.

The death occurred yesterday of John McCarthy, a well known citizen of St. John. Deceased was in the 68th year of his age and leaves a wife, two daughters and four sons to mourn their loss. The sons are Thomas, Timothy, Michael and Edward, all of this city. The daughters are Mrs. A. Sawyer and Miss Nellie. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

As Mr. Beckley's future engagements will keep him in New York his reading of the Christmas Carol in the new Y. M. C. A. building on Monday, the 11th, may be the last opportunity St. John people will have for some time of hearing him, and as the seating capacity of the auditorium is limited, persons desirous of going should secure their tickets as soon as possible from the secretary of the building.

At the Seaman's Institute on Saturday evening Rev. Jas. Crisp delivered an interesting address. Miss M. Conboy was the accompanist. The evening and at the close of the service by the ladies of the Seaman's Institute. Rev. Geo. A. Ross of Hampton was the speaker to a large number on Sunday evening and his address proved very interesting. Many good voices were heard among the seamen at the song service. The choir of the Queen Square Methodist sang special appropriate selections during the evening. Citizens are asked to remember the entertainment on Thursday evening.

The annual meeting of the Sunday school class of the Ladlow street United Baptist Church Sunday school was held yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The class has had a very successful year. The following officers were elected: President, R. I. Kowgan; vice president, C. R. Easton; Rec. Sec., J. L. Hazelwood; Asst. Rec. Sec., W. C. R. Allan; Treas., F. R. Christopher; convener social committee, H. B. Yearwood; convener lookout committee, J. Akery; trustee, B. H. Parsons. At the close of the school yesterday the teacher was presented with a pair of gold cut links, a token of the respect with which he is held by the class.

ST. JOHN BUSINESS COLLEGE

Not all the old students have yet returned from their vacation, but few new students last week was the record in the history of the college.

Every Woman

Use the wonderful MARVELL'S Hair Spray the new Yastal Spray. It is the best hair dressing ever used. It is the only hair dressing that does not contain any harmful ingredients. It is the only hair dressing that does not contain any harmful ingredients. It is the only hair dressing that does not contain any harmful ingredients.

BERELIOT SIGHTED.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The French liner steamer La Bretagne, which arrived from Havre today, reported that on January 7, in lat. 46.57 N., long. 46.1 W., she passed the wreck of a schooner with the name Isabelle Alice painted on her stern. The La Bretagne ran in close to the derelict, but saw no signs of life aboard. No schooner of the name of Isabelle Alice appears in the shipping register. She is believed to have been a French fishing boat.

REPORT IS OF GREAT VALUE

Deals With Canada's Mining Industries.

Total Gold Production in Yukon in 1907 Was $122,931,000.

OTTAWA, Jan. 10.—The most complete and authoritative report on the mining and metallurgical industries of Canada ever compiled has just been issued by the department of mines under the direction of the Minister, Hon. Wm. Tupper, and Dr. E. M. Hazen, director of mines. It is a volume of 572 pages, and is the result of the labors during the past year of a special staff of geologists and engineers, each having special knowledge of particular districts in which they have reported.

Of Practical Value

The report, which will be of great practical value to everyone interested in the mining and metallurgical industries of the Dominion, covers an immense amount of information respecting the mineral resources of the various provinces, details as to the character and output of individual properties, manufacturing processes, prospects for future development, etc. There are also many illustrations of mining and metal working plants and maps showing location of minerals in the various provinces. The statistical part of the report was typographed in a bulletin issued by the department last year. The figures given show in the aggregate a mineral production for all Canada valued at $83,827,777 in 1907, compared with only a little over $20,000,000 twelve years ago.

Gold Production

In the portion of the report devoted to the Yukon it is stated that the total production of gold from 1896 to 1907 was $122,931,000. The report deals at considerable length with the coal bearing areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and points out the immediate possibilities for the coal mining industry in the provinces. "The construction already under way," says the report in reference to Alberta, "and projected for the near future by the great railway companies must result in a great increase in the production of coal, so that a country originally deemed purely agricultural will become one of the leading coal mining provinces of the Dominion."

George Gibbons, of London, chairman of the Canadian section of international waterways commission, was in Ottawa yesterday conferring with Sir Wilfrid Laurier relative to the treaty with the United States respecting international waterways now ready for ratification at London and Washington. It is understood that all details in connection with the treaty have now been agreed on satisfactorily to both Canada and United States and terms will follow unanimous recommendations made last year in respect of international waterways commission.

Hon. William Pugsley, who was in Washington last week in connection with the treaty, returned to Ottawa yesterday.

A BUSY TIME AT OAK HALL SATURDAY

Oak Hall, after being closed some days in preparation for the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the business, opened their doors Saturday morning to the public with the announcement that they would conduct for the next twelve days a monster marked down sale. The response was spontaneous and generous—on all day long and up to eleven o'clock at night the store was crammed, jammed full of eager buyers. At times their large staff of clerks, which was largely added to for the occasion, was greatly overtaxed.

At some time during the sale, copies of a handsome booklet containing a history of the building which is occupied by Oak Hall and which was built by James Scullar about 1820, will be given away to customers.

How many of the citizens of St. John are aware of the fact that the Post office once occupied this building? This booklet contains this and other interesting information.

It is well worth your while to visit Oak Hall during their anniversary celebration.

SEASICKNESS Quickly Cured

"Motherdell's" quickly cures Sea and Train Sickness. Guaranteed. Money refunded if not satisfactory. For sale at Drug Store and First-class Steamers. Mothersell Remedy Co., Ltd., 201 State Street, Detroit. For sale and recommended in St. John by A. Clippin Smith, G. A. Moore, Royal Pharmacy and G. A. Packer.

DO NOT WORSHIP THE RIGHT GOD

Church Goes Astray, Declares Minister

Divine Declares That Man Must Place His Mind on Practical Things.

Declaring that man must plant his feet solidly on the ground and his mind on practical things before he can accomplish anything, and that the God the churchman worships today is not the God of the work of the common day, the only one worth worshipping, the Rev. J. Jas. McCaskill delivered an eloquent scholarly sermon last night before the congregation of St. Matthew's church. Mr. McCaskill's subject was Strength for the Common Day.

He said in part: "There are many gods which can sustain a man for the special occasions which have laid down their lives without a murmur fired by the thought of a sudden duty, but they were wholly inadequate for the commonplace things of every day. If we can believe Xantippe, Socrates was impossible as a husband, but he is enrolled among the noble company of martyrs."

"It is not at Worms when he faces the hate and fury of the church that Luther is hero, but in the quiet of his study when the demons of doubt, discouragement and despair are so real to him that he flings his ink well at a grinning devil against the opposite wall. Men have gone into action or charged up San Juan Hill inspired by Dutch courage, the 600 engaged in their spectacular ride inspired by the enthusiasm of the leader, but it is the prolonged campaign, for the ship at anchor, for the night sufferer waiting for a more bitter dawn, nothing will suffice but the inspiration of a close personal God. The man linked with a sword of a woman, the wife with a bearded husband and still maintaining their sweetness of temper even the highest inspiration God can give to His children. They need a God who will enable them to walk and not faint."

"The young Gallian, a vain dreamer, is brought before the altar, self-satisfied judge and asked to own his dreams, to explain the truth and faith and love and God and many other strange things of which he spoke. 'I thought of those things too,' said Pilate, 'when I essayed to mount up with wings as eagles, but I have seen virtue and vice alike go unrewarded until they are as dead as the wind-blown leaves of the tree. They need a God who will enable them to walk and not faint.'

"The young Gallian, a vain dreamer, is brought before the altar, self-satisfied judge and asked to own his dreams, to explain the truth and faith and love and God and many other strange things of which he spoke. 'I thought of those things too,' said Pilate, 'when I essayed to mount up with wings as eagles, but I have seen virtue and vice alike go unrewarded until they are as dead as the wind-blown leaves of the tree. They need a God who will enable them to walk and not faint.'

NEW BOWLING LEAGUE TO START NEXT WEEK

It Will be Composed of Members of Different Catholic Societies.

Next Monday evening the bowling league between a number of the Catholic societies in the city will be opened. The teams entered will be: St. Peter's Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, St. Joseph's, St. John the Baptist, Irish Literary and Benevolent Society and the Father Matthew Association.

The competition in the past week on the St. Peter's alleys has resulted in the following being chosen to constitute the team to enter the league: St. Joseph's, St. John the Baptist, Irish Literary and Benevolent Society and the Father Matthew Association.

Two games will be rolled on the St. Peter's alleys, and an interest is shown by the different teams. A meeting to make final arrangements will be held during the week.

ADDRESS ON TEMPERANCE

The Thorne Lodge meeting yesterday was presided over by E. W. Stockford. The Exmouth street quartette rendered two selections.

Rev. Gordon Dickie delivered an excellent address dealing with the advances of the temperance reform. "Fifty years ago it was considered that liquor was necessary to bodily health," said Mr. Dickie. "Now no one would advance such belief. The movement had been gaining strength. Hard headed business men were now bringing practical common-sense and not theory to bear on the problem. The petition for ward prohibition is strong evidence of this. This movement will grow until the city has been cleared of the evil traffic."

Hon. Robt. Maxwell will address the meeting next Sunday.

PRISONER IN WATER STREET LOCKUP MAKES 3 DESPERATE ATTEMPTS TO HANG HIMSELF

A DEEPER ATTEMPT TO HANG HIMSELF

Creased with liquor and filled with a determination to take his own life, Patrick Curvall gave Police-Sergeant, Gro. Baxter, a lively hour in the latter street lockup Saturday evening between 8 and 7 o'clock.

Officer Silas Perry, who was doing duty on Mill street, saw the prisoner on Smythe street, near the corner of Mill, and as he was unable to take care of himself, the officer placed him under arrest. A team was then procured and the man hauled to the lockup. Here Sergt. Baxter took him under his care.

Before being placed in a cell the prisoner was carefully searched and his coat, necktie and muffer taken away, as he had been threatening to take his life on the way to the lockup. Sergt. Baxter, thinking that the man was perfectly safe, walked up to Market square. On his return he was standing in front of the cell door leading to the lockup when his attention was attracted by a slight noise inside the building. Hastening inside he was horrified to find the prisoner with his supporters fastened to a bar above the cell door and a noose drawn tightly around his neck. Reaching through the bars of the door, the sergeant broke the suspensives and the man fell to the floor like a log, his eyes bulging out and his tongue hanging out to the fullest extent. After working with the prisoner until he recovered consciousness, the sergeant removed the suspensives and closing the door, waited outside to see if any further attempts were made. His wait, however, was of short duration, for just as soon as the prisoner believed he was alone he stripped off his shirt and making a noose with a sleeve, ran to the ceiling of the cell. This was done so quickly that before the sergeant could enter the cell the man was again unconscious. This garment was then taken away, but the prisoner was not to be so easily stopped and when he thought the officer had departed, removed his trousers and started in to repeat the same performance. The sergeant was too quick for him, however, and relieved him of his last garment. Sergt. Baxter was of the opinion that the man's resources were at an end when he discovered him hastily unhooking his boots in a mad endeavor to obtain a shoelace with which he hoped to complete his rash work. These he would not give up without a struggle. It was only the great strength of Sergt. Baxter which saved the man from destroying himself.

The sergeant stated to The Sun last night that his prisoner put up one of the stiffest scraps he has witnessed in some time, and although he had no difficulty in handling him a less powerful man might have had his work cut out for him.

When asked by the sergeant the reason for wishing to destroy himself the man said that he wished to die the death of Robert Emmett and not disgrace Ireland by being locked up.

After every particle of clothing had been removed from the body of the prisoner he endeavored to kill himself by butting his head against the bars, and falling to accomplish the desired end in this manner he tried with his own hands to choke himself to death. The police kept watch over him, however, until the effects of the liquor had died away and the would-be suicide finally quieted down.

He will face Judge Ritchie today on the charge of drunkenness and to the amount of his fine $25. It is added that he was sentenced to the workhouse so quickly that before the sergeant could enter the cell the man was again unconscious. This garment was then taken away, but the prisoner was not to be so easily stopped and when he thought the officer had departed, removed his trousers and started in to repeat the same performance. The sergeant was too quick for him, however, and relieved him of his last garment. Sergt. Baxter was of the opinion that the man's resources were at an end when he discovered him hastily unhooking his boots in a mad endeavor to obtain a shoelace with which he hoped to complete his rash work. These he would not give up without a struggle. It was only the great strength of Sergt. Baxter which saved the man from destroying himself.

SPEAKER CALLS THEM MANY MARRIAGES

BIBLE GERRYMANDERS LAST SIX MONTHS

Mr. Dowling's Criticism of Sermon Number of Ceremonies Performed

Declares Name of Rev. Mr. McCaskill's Church Should Be Changed.

In the Christadelphian Hall last evening E. J. Dowling in the course of his address referred to the published report of a recent sermon delivered in this city by Rev. J. McCaskill.

Mr. Dowling said in part: The unhappy thesis that Christ was nothing more than a man is one of the bold assertions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler," or "The Church of the Saint with the fantastic notions of the new theology and originates in a misconception of the character and person of God and His Father concerning His purpose with regard to the earth and man upon it. Mr. McCaskill calls Matthew "an imaginative scribbler," because he records an event that does not harmonize with the new theology, namely, the miraculous birth of Christ. As Matthew is the patron saint of the church over which Mr. McCaskill presides, that church should in the future be known not simply as "St. Matthew's Church," but by the more euphonious name, "The Church of the Imaginative Scribbler