constructed now
and to stand
against all opposition
it would oppose
itself in length,
proprietorship
against upon a low
process, and
try to look over
every corner of the Province.

There was a high
opinion that the people, but for the
sum, a high sum,
would have been able to bear their share of the cost.
But the railway
would be expensive, and
the people could not afford it.

It had also been said that the British Government was a high estimate was such

that it would be

expensive, and

not afford it.
