"I was given ether, of course, when my naturally in thinking that the blood spattered all over him was my own, I felt badly. One man, McLeod by name, who died a few days later, felt terribly over it, and said repeatedly he thought it terrible for a man to come through the ward in that condition.

"During the time I was suffering from the amputation, I was given beef tea and chicken broth. The latter was warm, but reversely that the blood spatter as this to die! Another patient, named Oram, or Orman, went out and begged some toast from another nurse and gave it to Richards, who said it was the first thing he had been able to eat to keep on his stomach in many days.

The doctors used a stomach pump on the man, who was terribly frightened of being choked by the pump. All the patients heard the commotion and knew what it was about. This was about two months before I left.

"Talk about bed bugs! It was terrible so I got another patient, Fred Thomson, to do it for me. The mice were scampering around everywhere and one of the atients used to set a trap for them, but metimes they used to get away from nim and we had our chief amusement in watching them. I have seen them jump on the beds, and one night just as I was dozing asleep I felt a tugging at the cor-ner of my spread and next moment I saw a big mouse on my bed. I brushed him away and he jumped off. The patients said he came down hard for a little mouse. They used to get in the fruit my wife brought and destroy it, until she brought a covered dish to keep it in. "Sometimes a male nurse used to visit the ward once a day, not oftener. I often had to ask for him, and sometimes he would come and sometimes he wouldn't. There were always some patients well-enough to help the others who were unable to look after themselves. "I saw one of the physicians under the all the patients discussing it. I know several patients who also say they saw one of the doctors intoxicated. The possible exception among the nurses is now out of the country, and of her Mr. Porter was unwilling to speak. The story of his ten months' stay in the hospital is best told in Mr. Porter's own words and is as follows:

"Mrs. Troombley has not exagerated to the hospital about three weeks ago. The friend who removed Mr. Day to his home at Westfield Beach, about 14 miles out, on Monday, is Joseph Thompson, machinist, of this city. The facts of the case as told to The Telegraph are as follows:

The story of his ten months' stay in the hospital is best told in Mr. Porter's own words and is as follows:

"Mrs. Trombley has not exaggerated matters in regard to conditions in the hospital so far as the food is concerned. During my ten months' stay there were very few occasions on which the bread was sweet. As a very general rule it was sour and dark and given to the patients in great thick slices. The butter was terrible and the potatoes served at dinner strong, green looking and bitter. I have frequently had to send them away after the first taste. Beef was the chief kind of meat provided and the meats were sometimes good and sometimes otherwise. Fresh fish was given twice a week and was as a rule good. The only dessert I saw in the ten months was plain boiled rice with milk and sugar; sometimes a plain bread pudding with sugar was served. As a rule I was on full diet during my stay for, with the exception of the time of my operation, I felt fairly well, but even then I should have fared badly. The many independent of the man, but the only attention to the man, but the only atten attention to the man, but the only atten-tion the nurse paid was to reprove Day for making a noise. Day got mad and made so much more noise that the nurse came and lay Richards' head back on the pillow, but without attempting to wipe him. Day then got a towel and tossed it up. He talked to me and others, and naturally in thinking that the blood spattered all over him are the blood spattered al

the amputation, I was given beef tea and chicken broth. The latter was warm, but very greasy and I could not take it. I told my wife and she spoke to the nurse who said that she knew the broth was not fit for me and was too greasy, but that she couldn't help it. Mrs. Porter got permission to make me beef tea and broth, and everything she brought to the hospital was with the full knowledge and consent of Doctors Macaulay and Morris.

"There was an insane woman near our before they were given, that one of the visiting doctors ordered a prescription on Sunday, and the medicine did not appear until the following Friday. It was given by Nurse Kelly that night, but was not given the next day and when Day spoke to the nurse about it she said that she had forgotten, then she said she thought the treatment was going to be changed, but four days elapsed before there was another treatment. Day says it was nothing unusual to ask for a drink and have consent of Doctors Macaulay and Morris.

"There was an insane woman near our ward for nearly six weeks and at nights kept the patients awake shouting and her answer was 'Yes. I suppose she must keep the patients awake; I heard her last night, but my room is so far away the sound of her shouts only came to me faintly." All the patients spoke of it, and as a consequence, such a state of affairs affects one's nerves after awhile.

"Around tea time one day the woman insane woman near our ing unusual to ask for a drink and have to wait a couple of hours for it, and that, when he lay unable to move himself he requested assistance in obeying the calls of nature two hours before he got attention, and then as the attendant happened to be interrupted in coming to him he had to wait two hours longer. Finally," said Mr. Thompson, "Day concluded there was no prospect of his being as comfortable in the hospital as in his own humble home and got me to remove him."

Institution at Sussex Flourishing-Forty in Attendance.

Sussex, N. B., Feb. 27-The Provincial ceived and 21 students have already been enrolled, coming from the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and P. E. Island. Quite a number who are here at present have taken the course in former years, which shows that the young dairymen of the country see the necessity obtaining greater information along their lines of work in order to meet the active competition found in the old country mar-kets. The fact that some of the markets in England require an article different in the makers to wish to learn what these markets demand and then how to make whatever they may ask for. At the school, roll is called at 8 o'clock and the students, divided into four classes, one group going to the milk testing department and one each going to the cheese separating and butter making rooms, where they receive practical instructions. After this the classes assemble in the lecture room, where an address is given by one of the instructors, after which discussion follows.

About 3,500 pounds of milk per day is used, 1,800 being made into cheese. A new Simplex churn and butter worker has been added to the dairy school equipment, and Kings county can boast of having as up-to-date dairy school as is in Canada. The school is supported almost entirely

HEROIC HEART "FOOD"

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the heart is heroic because in cases of heart disease seemingly beyond all human aid it goes to the very brink of the "Black River" and snatches from it the heart-sick victim.

In a trice it allays pain—in a twinkling it gives strength and vigor and it works a quick and permanent cure as by magic. It is the one great heart remedy which rightly bears the crowa of supremacy and on which is inscribed the life words, "It never fails." Thirty minutes after taking the first dose, the sick heart forgets its pain. Try it.
