PEOPLE CALLED METHODISTS.

fervice lasted from five to half past fix. The Italian (with a few Vaudois) began at nine. The fecond fervice for the English (including the Sermon and the Hody Communion) continued from half an hour past ten, till about half an hour past twelve. The French fervice began at one. At two I catechifed the children. About three began the English fervice. After this was ended, I joined with as many as my largest room would hold, in reading, prayer, and finging praise. And about fix the fervice of the Germans began : at which I was glad to be prefent, not as a teacher, but as a learner.

VIII. On Friday, December 2, finding there was no poffibility of preaching to the Indians, I left Savannah, and going through Carolina, on Saturday 24th, failed over Charleftown-bar. After a pleafant voyage, on February 1, 1738, early in the morning landed at Deal. And on Friday 3d, I came once more to London, after an absence of two years and near four months.

† Within three weeks following, (while I remained in town at the request of the Trustees for the Colony of Georgia) 1 preached in many churches, though I did not yet see the nature of faving faith. But as foon as 1 faw this clearly, namely on Monday, March 6, I declared it without delay. And God then began to work by my ministry, as he never had done before.

IX. On Monday, May 1, our little fociety began in London. But it may be observed, the first rise of Me*ibodifm* (fo called) was in November 1729, when four of us met together at Oxford : the second was at Savannah, in April 1736, when twenty or thirty persons met at my house : the last, was at London, on this day, when forty or fifty of us agreed to meet together every Wednesday evening, in order to a free conversation, begun and ended with finging and prayer. In all our steps we were greatly affisted by the advice and exhortations of Peter Boehler, an excellent young man, belonging to the society commonly called Moravians.

X. In fummer I took a journey into Germany, and fpent fome time at Hernuth, a little town where feveral Moravian families were fettled. I doubt, fuch another
