PROGRESS OF THE WAR [January 20 to January 26]

The week under review was one of great activity over nearly all fronts, and the outstanding feature was the Russian success in the Caucasus.

On the Western front the Germans made several drives at the Champagne and Artois districts, and captured some trenches from which they were subsequently expelled.

On the Russian front in Europe less activity seems to have prevailed than in the week preceding, and minor actions only were reported, leaving the situation very much at the close of the week as it was at the beginning.

On the Asiatic front, however, and especially in the Caucasus, the Russians scored signal victories. The scene of the great battles was in the vicinity of Erzerum, a town in Turkish Armenia.

The British forces in Mesopotamia advanced to the assistance of their brothers-in-arms besieged at Kut-el-Amara by the Turks on the Tigris about 23 miles below Kut-el-Amara, in which both sides sustained severe losses that an armistice of a few hours was agreed upon in order to bury the dead.

It is not possible accurately to describe as satisfactory the result of recruiting in New Brunswick during the week ending January 22.

In the Balkans some activity was reported. The Montenegrins had not capitulated, but were retiring from their country to Albania.

In the hostilities between Italy and Austria much activity prevailed throughout the entire front, but no important success was achieved by either side.

Africa once more figures in the week's reports. The British in Egypt suppressed a rising of the Senussi tribes, which have hitherto been supposed to be friendly to British rule.

plot which ended in the seizure of President Madero and his brother Gustavo.

On February 19, 1915, with the army at his back, General Huerta made himself provisional president of Mexico and took office.

Three days later came the assassination of Francisco Madero, his brother, and Jose Maria Pino-Suarez, vice-president under Madero, as they were being taken in an automobile, under guard, from the palace to the penitentiary.

On July 7, when his finances were exhausted, his army thoroughly beaten and disorganized, and his enemies rapidly resigning to the Mexican Congress.

On July 20, Huerta and Blanguet and their families sailed for Spain.

In June General Huerta went west ostensibly to visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and on June 27 he was arrested at Newman, New Mexico, by a United States deputy marshal and his men on charges of violating the neutrality of this country by planning here military movements in Mexico.

He was taken to Fort Bliss and kept under guard, and remained there until December 28, 1915, when his illness became serious and he was removed to his home in El Paso.

Bank of Nova Scotia Annual Report

The 84th annual report of The Bank of Nova Scotia shows that this institution's reputation for exceptional strength has been fully maintained during the past year.

Its new well over $100,000,000, making it the largest of the four largest banks in Canada.

The outstanding feature of the report, however, is the large amount of cash which alone would be sufficient to liquidate 20% of the liabilities to the public, and there is a correspondingly large amount of immediately available assets.

These facts considered in conjunction with the large reserve fund of $12,000,000, as compared with the capital of $6,500,000, indicate that the Bank of Nova Scotia is in an exceedingly strong position from the standpoint of depositor and shareholder alike.
