June beats the record for Dry Goods selling. We never sold so much money's worth of Dry Goods in June before.

The steady persistent effort is telling in our favor.

The great assortment of goods; the system on which we do business; our close buying; our cheap selling are all in our favor. There is no doubt but we are building up a great business in which all the people are interested.

Immediately after the holidays we make further enlargements and alterations which will materially facilitate our growth.

We are holding a big sale all next week to reduce and clear out the stock. The prices are of interest to everybody.

CHAPTER II.

Daniel Dexter and His Wife—Mr. Shuffie Begins to Play His Game.

Forming this heroic resolution, she sat still, and for many minutes nothing was heard in the chamber but the soft rustle of her dress as she slipped on a pair of slippers. The sleeping child, on whose face there lay a smile of ineffable sweetness.

In about a quarter of an hour steps were heard in the ante-room, the door of the chamber was flung open and the captain entered, with Shuffie behind him.

"So, Sal, I am told you are deceiving me," cried the captain, who was hoarse with wine. "Where is the money? Give it to me!"

"No, no, George," cried Sal. "The money is not mine. It is the child's, and will be required to bring her up and educate her."

"Then you are a liar, and I'll bring her up and educate her," cried the captain, who was hoarse with wine. "I will not, George; on that point I am determined."

"Take care, girl. Would you brave me?" thundered the captain, bursting all at once into a towering passion. "You should know me now, I think."

"I do know you," retorted Sal. "I think I know you as well as you know me. My spirit will brook control no more than yours. Let us not, then, come in each other's way."

"So you defy me—defy me to my very face!" shouted the captain, entirely losing command of himself. "I do replied the equally proud-hearted Sal.

"Then you shall learn who is master," he exclaimed. Springing towards her and clutching her by her throat, he thrust his hand into her bosom, and obtained the money. In a moment she snatched the dagger from his girdle, and would have plunged it into his heart, had he not seen it flash in the air as she raised it, and sprang back to avoid the blow.

"Dare to lay hands on me again," she cried, "and one, if not both, of us shall die."

Dashed, brave though he was, quailed before the enraged woman. Had it been a man who thus braved and threatened him, he would have killed him on the spot, but he was not yet so brutalized in nature as to take the life of a woman. Restraint took the life of a woman. Restraint, therefore, by a severe effort, he drew back and muttered through his clenched teeth—

"I shall repeat this. I leave you till tomorrow to come to your senses. If you are then obstinate, it will be all success for you and for that squalling child. Come, Shuffie, she shall have a few hours' reflection."

The enraged captain, and cunning lawyer withdrew, returning to the hall, that the former might soothe his chafed spirit by the usual means of going on, and by large and frequent quaffs of the wine cup.

The moment the door closed, Lucy, who had been awakened by the scuffle, and terrified by the scene, sprang from the bed, and, running to the spot in which Sal had thrown herself, cast her arms around her neck, and nestled closely in her bosom.

"You're not that man and man hurt me?" she whispered, lifting her tearful eyes to Sal's face. "If my own life can shield thee from his power," answered Lucy with fervour, "and she clasped Lucy to her breast, and strove to keep down its throbbings."

Many minutes passed in silence. Lucy lay quite still, and Sal held her on her breast. What strong feelings were struggling through the woman's soul during that silent hour! Her wild, uncontrolled, and unbridled passion, her fierce vengeance, but a new passion had that night awakened up, and was already blazing with an intensity which gained for it a power equal to the others. That passion was a strange, wild love for the beautiful child clinging to her breast. To save her from harm, to tend and care for her, to shield her from all that might do her a mischief which suddenly shone out before her, and flashed up into her being, she was blighted and blazed beyond all recovery, but here was another field of innocence, and now it was covered and choked with weeds and briars; but here was another field of innocence which she might cultivate and preserve till it yielded true and holy fruit. The Garden of Eden into which she had been put, that she might keep it and dress it, it had been lost by long ago to wander for ever in the wilderness, but here was another field of innocence, and now it was covered and choked with weeds and briars; but here was another field of innocence which she might cultivate and preserve till it yielded true and holy fruit.

Mr. Blair Will See the Intercolonial Gets a Chance.

Toronto Globe's Ottawa correspondent: The Minister of Railways and Canals has taken a step—whichever shows that he is alive to the responsibility which he has assumed in the Intercolonial. Mr. Blair has caused the C. P. R. to be notified that the end of the fiscal year now current the arrangement under which the C. P. R. uses the Intercolonial Railway for freight, between St. John and Halifax will be cancelled. This notification will come as a surprise to the Intercolonial, and a pleasant one at that. Seven years ago the Government, in its agreement with the C. P. R., made it the opinion of the present Minister of Railways that the Intercolonial Railway was a Government road. For example, under it no Intercolonial agent could even advise a shipper to ship "over the Intercolonial."

An utter collapse. The man who has always been a model of business method and dignity—who would as soon think of putting his hand on the pocket of a man on the street as of his own—has come an utter loss of ambition, dignity, and health. He is at the bottom of the bankruptcy stairs in the face every business man who neglects his health. A man cannot work on forever if he is suffering from brain, nervous exhaustion, and debility. All these can come from a man who neglects to keep his digestion perfect, his bowels regular and his blood pure.

Businessmen everywhere have come to recognize Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as an invaluable remedy. It makes the digestion perfect, invigorates the liver, restores the appetite, regulates the bowels, purifies and builds up the blood, makes the flesh and muscles firm, and tones up the nerves. It is a business man's medicine.

That J. Herbert, Sr., of old Springfield, Mass. might write, "I want to tell you the good the 'Golden Medical Discovery' has done for me. I had erysipelas and cancer. Had a fever for eight years. I tried all remedies and failed. I bought a bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and it cured me. I have had no symptoms of it since. It has been three years since my cure. I am a Common Sense Medical Adviser. I have had a larger sale than any other book of this class ever offered the public. This book of 1000 pages with 500 illustrations, is full from cover to cover of practical advice on all health matters. This great book, in heavy manilla covers, is now of great value to whoever will send one cent stamps to pay for covers and mailing only. If an elegant French cloth binding is desired, send 50 cents. A MATTER OF JUSTICE

IS THE WAY A YOUNG LADY OF NEW BRUNSWICK VIEWS IT.

Suffered from Headaches, Pain in the Side and Heart Palpitation—She Thinks Similar Sufferers Should Know How She Found a Cure.

From the Fredericton Gleaner.

Miss Alma Millar, of Upper Southampton, N.B., is a daughter of Mr. Ezra Millar, a wealthy and influential farmer, and the young lady is a general favorite among those who have had occasion to congratulate her upon her complete restoration to health after a severe and trying illness.

When a correspondent of the Gleaner called upon her for publication, the young lady, though not at all anxious for publicity, consented to give her consent in the hope that her experience might prove beneficial to some of the young girls whose condition of health is very similar to what hers was previous to her cure. Miss Millar stated that when her illness began her mother was unable to look after the affairs of the household and the duties largely devolved upon her. She felt her growing weakness, and she felt that she must keep up. She says: "Notwithstanding my efforts I found my appetite failed, my complexion became sallow and my eyes swollen in my head. I was troubled with dizziness, shortness of breath and palpitation of the heart. I was unable to do anything but rest. I was almost constantly troubled with a pain in the side and severe headaches. When I went up stairs I was obliged to rest. Life had become almost a burden and at last I became almost a wreck. My friends feared I was going into consumption and one remedy after another was tried with no beneficial results until I was recommended to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. In less than three weeks I was able to leave my bed and go about the house, and the use of the Pink Pills a few weeks longer completely restored my health and strength and drove away all symptoms and pains which had made my life so miserable. I feel that in bringing this matter before the public I am but doing simple justice to suffering humanity, and I hope it will be of some benefit to some of our family have used Pink Pills with equally good results."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for some of our family have done for other young girls throughout the world. Twenty thousand inhabitants of Guelph, in Manitoba, on the left bank of the Manitoba, between the confluence of the South and the North with that river are benefitted as a result of the recent flood. Most of them are destitute also, 100 were drowned.

They are Good.

Mr. Jan Hagan, the well-known ex-herald of Kempenfelt, Ont., says: "For some years I have been greatly troubled with pain across my back. Urinary troubles caused me much loss of sleep, and I suffered from a tired worn out feeling. Doan's Kidney Pills gave me relief in a short time. The pain in my back has disappeared, and I feel that I would be doing wrong not to recommend them to those suffering as I did. They are the best medicine I ever used."
