Burglars Feast in Victim's Home.

Spread Table and Top Wine Cellar Following Success in Elmhurst Houses.

New York, Oct. 19.—After breaking into and robbing four other fine residences in the exclusive Broadway section of Elmhurst, L. I., before daylight yesterday, five men halted their automobile at that of William Spencer, forced the cellar door, and after gathering jewels and silverware worth $3,000 from the rooms upstairs, spread a feast on the servants' table in the basement. From the ice box they took roast chicken and beef, opened several cans of sardines and caviar, drew on the bread box and drank a dozen bottles of Mr. Spencer's best wines, which they selected from his wine cellar with a connoisseur's skill.

The feast lasted long, as was indicated by fragments and by the barren ice-box. They also found several boxes of Mr. Spencer's cigars.

Efforts were made to enter at least a dozen houses in the same neighborhood, but in several the robbers were frightened away by dogs. Five were entered and robbed. In each home the burglars went to the bedrooms, got what jewellery they could find on dressing tables and broke into the silver chests in the dining room. They did not take any plated ware.

From one residence they took a valuable fur coat, which had just been taken from storage. In none of the houses robbed were the burglars heard, and no one knew of their calls until the families arose at the usual hour.

It is known that there were five men because five plates were used at the feast at the Spencer home. The intruders even went to the trouble of spreading a tablecloth and napkins.

Boosting.

Help your town along by boosting! Wear a bright and hopeful face. Do not be forever roosting somewhere near the waiting place! You can't help your town by knocking, if it's in a backward groove, but some optimistic talking does a lot to help things move. In the mud on town was sticking, evidently anchored there, for her people all were kicking, all were dishing up despair. All were groaning o'er their taxes, shedding tears in a stream, all had hammers, clubs and axes, ready for each helpful scheme. So the village sat and rotted till a booster landed there; soon the trouble's seat he spotted, saw the fungus in the air, and he jarred the village croakers, stirred them up to hump along, till the place was full of jokers and the breeze was full of song. Citizens forsook the habit of beavelling this and that, and the timid business rabbit rustled like a tiger cat, and they all turned in kerwhopping, singing forth the hamlet's praise, and that hamlet, lately drooping, filed its neighbours with amaze. Now, this story, true as preaching, shows what one lone man do, if instead of doleful screeching, he yells "cockadoodledoo!" For you stimulate your neighbours every time you give three cheers, and the harvest of your labours will be reaped in coming years.

The Brush Turkey.

The brush turkey, which is found in Australia, New Guinea, the Solomon Islands, Borneo and many other parts of the globe and which is a distant relative of the grouse and the pheasant, belongs to the megapodidae or megapodes, and is remarkable in that it anticipated man as the inventor of the incubator by a few hundred thousand years or so.

When the nestling season arrives two or more hens, with the assistance, perhaps, of a cock, build an immense heap of soil, mixed with decaying leaves and twigs. These mounds in New Guinea are sometimes 11 feet high and 25 feet in diameter and some have been found 15 feet in height and 60 feet in circumference. The hens then scrape with their enormously large feet (hence the name megapodes) a hole in the centre of the heap and in it deposit their eggs to the number of a score or more, afterwards covering over the hole. In course of time the heat generated by the decaying vegetation hatches the eggs. The chicks, which have been living and fattening on the food yolk, brow and shed their nesting down and develop their first suit of feathers while still within the walls of their ivory "cradles." When at last they cut their way out of the shell, they rest for a few hours in the mound; then they wriggle out, the quills sheath peel off and they cannot only run but fly alone.

Fishery News.

We learn by the Fogota that there is still plenty of fish to be had at Bay de Verde, and when herring bait is procurable, 1 and 2 qts. per boat are taken daily. All around Bonavista Bay fish is as plentiful as any time during the summer. At Indian Arm last week squid was very plentiful and trawlers daily secured 2 to 3 qts. The Whalen brothers spent two days at Long Island and took 5 qts. each. At Greenspond and nearby places also good work was done.
