Mr. Percy Arnold is again in town visiting friends.

The opening temperance meeting in the Parish Hall, Thursday evening the 8th was a great success. Dr. Maguire presided and gave some very interesting opening remarks. A. McG. McDonald, Druggist from Campbellton, was the first speaker and gave us a great many facts about the condition of things in Campbellton with and without license. Mr. McDonald spoke for one hour and I am sure the majority present would have been willing to have him continue another hour as his remarks were grand and coming from a man of high character, we have every reason to believe that every word uttered were as true as gospel. Rev. Mr. Love of Port Daniel was the next speaker taking chiefly for his subject temptation, we are all tempted to evil, but one of the worst evils to overcome with so many weak ones is the drink, appetite especially when they come in contact with the open glazing bars. Mr. Love used many quotations of scripture and warned his hearers to be very careful on the 26th how they cast their vote and to those who always say I want to be free to do as I please he urged to take heed lest by using their liberty they offend those that are weak. There was also several temperance songs and recitations. We are glad to see the good work prospering and many are rising to the great opportunity to banish the rum traffic from our midst.

Rev. W. B. MacCallum preached in the Presbyterian Church here Sunday evening past and returned to his own field in New Richmond Monday 12th. He was accompanied by his two sons Master Ross and Samuel MacCallum.

Poor appetite is a sure sign of impaired digestion. A few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will strengthen your digestion and improve your appetite. Thousands have been benefited by taking these Tablets. Sold by all dealers.

ST. JOHN EVANGELIST

Allow me Mr. Editor a little correspondence from our progressive little village.

We appreciate very much the newsy items given by our regular correspondent, but I think in the prospects of public interest generally he has failed until now to describe the numerous advantages of our locality.

The parish of St. John Evangelist is very large with a noble and laborious population of over 3000 souls, under the religious direction of our venerable and energetic pastor the Rev. J. O. Drapeau who has lived among us over 23 years. Let us note also that we possess, we might say, one of the most popular merchants of the County of Bonaventure in the person of Mr. George Frenette, mayor of our Municipality, secretary-treasurer of the School Commission and post master of the largest post office of this parish. All find in Mr. Frenette an intimate friend. Commercial travellers also find there the most perfect accommodations. We have also here a residing physician, Dr. J. A. Moris, four good blacksmiths and carriage-makers, Messrs. Wilfrid Aube, Patrick Barriault, Fred Greene and A. Francoeur, a tailor, Mr. Frank McBrearty who is at present erecting a magnificent house.

The lands are very fertile and the noble farmers have formed an Agricultural Circle which comprises over 250 members operated by directors under the orders of the Department of Agriculture.

However, one obstacle exists, and that is the damage caused by the rising of the waters of the Nouvelle River, which at the present time affects the domain of some of the most progressive farmers of this parish and threatens to completely ruin the roads, bridges, and lands in that vicinity. Some means have been taken by the Government to help in the protection of the roads and bridges, this was sufficient to commence the work only which has not been continued. The brave farmers in that vicinity earnestly desire that their petitions to the government would have special attention for the completion of works begun in the year 1911.

On Monday, May 12 the marriage of Mr. John McBrearty, son of Thos. McBrearty to Miss Harriet Fally, daughter of Mr. Lazare Fally took place here, both of this parish. All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McBrearty a happy journey through life.

On the 12th inst. the death of Mrs. Jos. Mercier nee Hermine Loubert occurred here. Though ailing for some time past, death was unexpected. Deceased was 82 years of age. Dr. DeWolfe, coroner was called to give a certificate of her death.

Not to interrupt your regular correspondence I will leave to him to enunciate the numerous visits of the distinguished persons which happen around and I hope their publication will not fail to appear.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for space allowed in your valuable paper.

PLEASING SINGER AT THE OPERA HOUSE

PLEASING SINGER
AT THE OPERA HOUSE

Mrs. F. Louise Tufts, the talented singer who has been engaged at the Opera House for the past five weeks is winning a large number of friends in the town. No doubt Mrs. Tufts is one of the best singers that Manager Dimock has ever engaged for the moving picture entertainment. Her engagement was originally for one week but on account of her ability Mr. Dimock has succeeded in securing her services for some time yet. The patrons of the Opera House will feel very sorry when the time comes when she will have to fulfill other contracts. The Graphic regrets that extended notice of this talented artist was omitted to this late date, but if any of our readers have not yet heard Mrs. Tufts sing, we assure them they have missed a treat.

HANDS UP

Shot by Fellow-Student at Essex School—Would Not Box

Once more the danger of young people being in possession of firearms has been demonstrated. The practice nearly ended in the death of Manuel Coello, a Spanish student at Forest House School, Woodford, when Frederick Sauri, sixteen, a Mexican, also a student at the school, was charged with attempted murder. Inspector Ellis saw the injured boy lying on a table, with a bullet wound in his stomach, and a doctor was attending him. In consequence of what he was told, he informed Sauri that he would be arrested on a charge of attempted murder, and when they walked into the latter's bedroom he said:

"We were playing here with boxing gloves, and I said, 'Shall we box?' and he said, 'No, no.' I said, 'Hands up! Hands up!' I took the revolver from the top of my desk and put it close to his stomach. I said, 'I will kill you.' I had no intention of shooting, but the revolver went off. The revolver fell on the floor, and he began to cry. I took hold of him around the waist and assisted him to the nursery. I am very sorry, as he was my best friend."

The inspector added that Sauri also told him that he purchased the revolver for $5 about three months previously, and the revolver in question—an automatic one—with three live cartridges in it, was handed to him by one of the masters at the school. On the door in the prisoner's bedroom was a spent cartridge, and also a live one.

In opening the case, Mr. Baines (prosecuting) said the scholars in the school were mostly foreigners, who resided there. Coello and Sauri went out for a walk, and Sauri alleged that Coello had played some tricks on him, and he would "have it back on him in some way." Sauri tried to induce Coello to box, but he would not, and Sauri said, "You won't fight I'll take my pistol and kill you. Whether that was said out of bravado or not he would not say, but it was certain that the pistol was loaded, and that it was fired by Sauri. Coello had since been at the London Hospital, where the bullet was extracted.

Coello, a youth of sixteen, said when they got back to the school they went into Sauri's room and put on boxing gloves. Sauri wanted him to box, but he would not, and took off the gloves. Sauri then said, "I'm going to shoot you," and picked up a pistol, which was loaded, and "took aim." He then unloaded the pistol, "because he did not want to shoot me," and believing there was no other cartridge in the revolver, pulled the trigger.

Mr. Melville (defending) said, having heard the evidence of the injured boy—for they could not call him a prosecutor—he felt that there was no evidence to show that the affair was other than an accident. After it occurred somebody appeared to have lost his head and sent for the police.

The case was dismissed.

An Englishman was entertaining his American cousin and was continually annoyed by being reminded of the superiority of things American. A number of attempts to show young Jonathan something that distanced American progress all resulted unsatisfactorily, and the Englishman in desperation escorted the cousin to Mount Vesuvius.

"Well," exultantly remarked the Englishman, "you haven't anything like that in America."

"Well, no," replied the American as he watched the outpouring of smoke and molten lava, but we have a little Niagara Falls over there that would put the whole thing out in a minute."
