WADY HALFA, Nov. 19 .- The Canadians gave Lord Wolseley an ovation Monday night. As his steamer passed the camp at Gemai bonfires were lit and cheers were raised, and the Canadian boatmen sang raised, and the Canadian boatmen sang the favorite Red River song. La Brigandiere. When Lord Wolseley commanded the Red river expedition, his favorite postime while en route was to have the boatmen indulge in singing. La Brigandiere was a great favorite with him, and he had his followers warble it on every convenient occasion. To hear La Brigandiere again sung so far away from home must have been a source of grateful pleasure to him.

A Clergyman's Suit Against Two Diocese The case of Rev. E. R. Stimson agains the anglican diocese of Huron and Toront was before Judge Ferguson at the chancery sittings yesterday. Two years ago the same case was heard or partly heard, and it was determined that the diocese of Toronto which was not then before the Toronto which was not then before the court was a necessary, party. This action was accordingly begun last month against both dioceses, and it now comes up for trial. The reverend plaintiff sues for arrears of his annual stipend of $400 from the commutation fund. He was one of the original commuters of the diocese of Huron, and was transferred to Toronto diocese in and was transferred to Toronto diocese in 1865. He then did duty in the parish of Chester and Norway for some time, but he has for some years past done no clerical duty whatever, though he professes his readiness and willingness to do such duty whenever called upon. The answer of the diocese is substantially "That Mr. Stimson has disqualified himself from doing clerical duty by engaging in commercial pursuits duty by engaging in commercial pursuits connected with the importing of foreign animals and curiosities and exhibiting the same, which we understand he is now doing in Toronto." He or Cameron, Q.C., and Mr. McPhillips for plaintiff; S. H. Blake, Q.C., for Huron diocese, and Mr. Moss, Q.C., and Mr. Falconbridge for the Toronto diocese. Judgment was

We have had several offers to run steamship lines for us on the Pacific, but I can only say at present that when the railway is fully open for traffic in the spring of 1886 a line of steamships will be ready to run to China and Japan in connection with it. As for the railway from Smith's Falls to Montreal all the arrangements have been gnade for the immediate construction of that line and also of the bridge across of that line, and also of the bridge across the St. Lawrence below Lachine, connecting with it, and by this time next year the bridge will be completed and trains running over it, which will be good news to the people of Montreal.

St. Peter's C. E. T. S. The school house, was filled at the monthly meeting of this society on Monday evening. These meetings are made most attractive and the result is they draw most attractive and the result is they draw large audiences that enter into the spirit of the work. Rev. Dyson Hague and Hillyard Dixon gave splendid addresses, full of zeal and earnestness, and the Willing Workers sang several glees and songs. A new feature was the singing of Moody's hymns after the style of the recent convention. During an intermission refreshments were enjoyed and at the conclusion of the meeting several signed the C. E. T. S. pledges.

The visitors were intoxicated, and wanted their fortunes told, but the clair-voyant declined to have anything to do with them.

She finally, however, gave way to McKeague's importunities, and the two went to her room, leaving McKeague's companions and a chambermaid in the hotel standing at the door outside. After a while the light in the room was extinguished and sounds were heard inside as if some person was being strangled. The girl shouted for Mrs. Collins (the landlady), who found the door locked and promptly burst it open. McKeague was straightening his apparel. The room was in considerable disorder. One of the clairvoyant's bracelets lay on the floor, and she herself was lying on the bed in the room.

The servant girl heard McKeague say while in the room: "I will paint the walls with blood if you do not tell my forture or if you make any noise." McKeague and his companion took their departure and have not been seen since. The police were not informed of the affair in time to arrest them. The unfortunate clairvoyant was in an hysterical state when Mrs. Collins broke in the door, and remained so till about le'clock this morning, with occasional relapses.

Ald. Davies expressed his conviction that the extension of a line over the Don, either by the Gerrard street or Kingston road bridges would be undesirable on account of the steep ascent in both approaches to the bridge in the one case, and the certainty of a difficulty arising with the Kingston Road tramway company in the other. He advocated the extension of the Toronto street railway system from St. Lawrence market along Front street and Eastern avenue, and thence up into the ward.
