To the Editor of the Church.

Absence from home prevented an earlier notice of your editorial of the 22nd December last, headed "Saint Peter's Church, Barton."—
On reading it, I called to mind reminiscent feelings of gone-by days—the people of the Gore District will remember them—and while I truly and readly admire your sentiments expressed in books. carriage to see for the first time, "the little Bar-A. M., received his first appointment—the many moss grown stones of the grave-yard, which is that with railroad speed, persons and circumstances are forgotten; not so with me. I do with real satisfaction recollect that in the year 1816, the late Richard Hatt of Dundas, Esquire, introduced into the "old Barton Church," Rev. Ralph Leeming, and stated to the people in a few words that he was a clergyman of the Church, duly ordained, authorised, as a minister of peace to perform all the functions of a clergyman, which embraces a great many kindly 287 collections, amounting to.....£407 19 3 and hopeful feelings in the transitory condition

It was his teaching, under God, that instilled into the minds of the contributors to the new Church the will to do the work now spoken of in such right terms of approbation. It was in that "old Church" too, hat many persons were taught by him through the sublime Liturgy of the Church, to recognize the Grand Architect of the universe, and infuse into the minds of the contributors the will to give of their earthly substance the means of creeting by its side the new edifice, in which to worship HIM who is the light of salvation, who shall keep them from fear and doubt, who is their strength, so that they shall not be afraid, that they may desire of the Lord to behold his fair beauty and to visit his temple, who in the time of trouble shall hide them in his Tabernacle and at last set them on a Rock of stone. we a debt of gratitude to the Rev eming, the first Pastor of the "old Barton that the world cannot pay.

by the late Depository, and inasmuch as it appeared that a very large amount of outstaning debts were still due to the Depository, far more than sufficient to pay all its liabilities; on the recommendation of the standing committee, it There are associations of feeling in this, that was unanimously resolved that all accounts which shall not have been settled by the 1st of February are to be placed in the hands of a solicitor, who will enforce the payment thereof, for this branch of the Society's operations being already indebted to the General Purpose Fund, it would not be just to make any further advance until proper steps have been taken to secure the payment of all that is due to it.

The Secretary made application for the payment of the Auditors of the Accounts for the past year. He stated that in consequence of the country exercises upon the clergy. Your past year, the old unsettled balances, and the books having been kept under a new system, they had this but also as accountants; that they had consequently devoted much more time to the work than could be expected from those who merely audit accounts. They, from delicacy, had made no charge, and he had been unable to ascertain thought competent to judge in such matters.

It was ruled that matters of business should always be treated as such, and as none but the time which they had been obliged to devote in order to the proper discharge of their duties, and request them to state the sum which would produced by the extraordinary increase in price of all the necessaries of life, might be easily brought forward. My object in now writing is to make a remark or two, on the remedy of tithes proposed by my Rev. brother Mr. Townley, as a cure for the grievous crying evil. I agree with him entirely as to the glorious position of efficiency that the Church would be placed in, if her members gave tithes of their substance; but, Rev. Sir. I do not think that the remedy is a practical one. I think if a clergyman was practical one. I think it a circly man that the forced to wait until this cure were applied, he forced to wait until this cure were applied, he satisfy them; and that the account be forthworld share the fate of the horse spoken of with paid. lately by your contemporary of the Gazette, who unhappily died when brought to live on a straw per diem.
