

This is to say, I suppose, that the future, like the present, depends entirely on people and especially on their awareness and their goodwill. If the future people of the North understand the problems of their world and are properly motivated, then I believe we can be optimistic about the future.

In the long run, our best hope is that the more fortunate in worldly terms will continue to care about the well-being of those less fortunate.