for Canada and are making their contribution to those ideals of affection, understanding, and tolerance which inspire most Canadians.

At this juncture, Mr. Speaker, I would like to formally second the resolution submitted by the hon. member for Verdun (Mr. Leduc), but before concluding I would like to make a few remarks with reference to the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. St. Laurent). All history testifies to the profound influence individuals exercise over human affairs. When the history of the last few years has been written, it will record with gratitude the contribution of wisdom and foresight made to Canada by the Prime Minister.

Whether he is at home or abroad in the countries of the world Canadians are proud that Canada has been able to produce a man like him. We value his Christian character, his courtesy, and his wisdom. We rejoice that he is with us in good health and good spirits. May the good Lord preserve him for many years to guide our deliberations.

On motion of Mr. Rowe the debate was adjourned.
