"MUST ABANDON FALSE KULTUR"

Archdeacon Cody Says Germany Must Be Compelled to Do So.

GREAT EASTER SERVICE

Patriotism Keynote and Music Was of Especially Appropriate Nature.

Germany must be compelled to abandon "false kultur of the sword," declared Archdeacon Cody at a service yesterday morning, which will be memorable in the history of his congregation...

The congregation of St. Paul's Church has very real and personal interest in the present war.

Patriotism was the keynote of the sermon, and the Easter music reached its climax with the national anthem.

Key to the Sermon. Ven. Archdeacon Cody preached on the resurrection "Christ," said the preacher, "possessed the key to the secret of death."

In this war time, Easter had a great lesson, that of trust in God. Christian fortitude would bring recompense of ample power to fulfil the duties of the hour.

The Easter message was one which showed to minds Paul's triumph over all adversity and attain heavenly solace.

Appropriate Music. "Christ Our Passover" (Humphreys) and "Awake Thou that Sleepest" (Stainer). Healey Willan played his own march "Triumphal as an organ postlude."

To Maintain Ideals. "Britain's part in the great conflict is not that of a seeker after territory or gold," said Ven. Archdeacon Cody at St. Paul's Church, East Bloor street, last night.

Referring to the German war-book published by the general staff, and distributed among the troops, the preacher said, "A more frightful document was never issued. It teaches that the end will justify any means, so long as victory is achieved."

The aim of the Teuton was for the benefit of the physical rather than for the uplifting of the moral life. The stand that Germany had taken showed that it desired to gain the whole world over the loss of its soul.

The last Sunday morning free breakfast of the season was held at Yonge street Mission yesterday morning. The attendance was very large.

Ordinary illness requires many changes of bed linen, but the cases for which this special call is made are of a much more pressing nature than even the worst case which might demand medical care.

Further particulars may be had from Mrs. A. McPhedran, 151 Bloor street west, Toronto.

THE GARDEN CONDUCTED BY R. TODD. Includes an illustration of a garden scene.

Out of the shadows of time has come down to us the mystery of the lily, wrapped round with the fragrance of love and the incomparable beauty of purity.

The most royal of all flowers, the lily stands alone and aloof, gracious queen of all blossoms, owning no other king than that of the heaven, and the sun. The most royal of all blossoms, in that she can mix with all tribes, and in all lands, and in all times, and remain unsullied in her purity.

From time immemorial all men have compared all beauty, all stardust, all love and all bliss, to the lily. In times prehistoric the lily reigned as a deity, a fact shown by geological times and the legends of the lily fields of Elysium, ruled over upon the lily-beds of the rosy dawn.

Coming down to the Egyptians, we find the lotus, the Nile sacred among all blossoms. This white water lily of our own present-day knowledge, floated over Egypt was a very sacred symbol, and an angel, pursued in love by earth, his feet were washed by the green enveloping pure soul within the perfect bud, until the green shadows of the Nile. And thus he spoke: "Fair queen, take my heart, thru eternity thine."

Earthward, gazed loving, thru gold shimmering air, "Beloved," say opening her white petals rare, "Since eternity dawn, see, thy heart within mine!"

And so, the lily stands pre-eminent among all flowers as the symbol of immortality. It is not to be wondered at, then, that at this, the one time of all in and commemorating the resurrection, the flower beloved of all men and all since immortality is eternally reign supreme all thru Easter-tide, and the Bermuda lilies to be seen in all shops, have come to be called Easter lilies because they lend themselves to easy cultivation and forcing for the one great event of the Christian year.

My gardeners who planted their bulbs in pots 12 or 14 weeks ago, according to instructions given in this department are now enjoying the blossoms of their own raising.

Remember, my new gardeners who buy Easter lily plants now in blossom, that the bulbs should be preserved, should be planted in August or early September, in the garden beds, where they will come up and blossom next summer.

breathing is extreme, or the above measures are not effective, or if the croup is caused by indigestion, give a teaspoonful of syrup of opium, which will produce vomiting and cause the child to relax.
