In this way, an ice-cold bottle, age is always obtainable, no matter how continuously it may be drawn, and a steady and even flow is secured, in contrast to the jerky and irregular discharges so commonly characteristic of fountains by other makers, to 1000 x 100 at 1000 ft in one mile, with several new designs have recently been brought out, as the "Renaissance" and the "North Star," to which the attention of the trade is invited, and which will be found to be well worthy of inspection. A field glass, a good optical instrument of 1000 ft to Mr. Smith is, himself, at the Sydney Exhibition, and can be seen at the Canadian Department. He is also acting as agent for several of the exhibitors of his manufactured soft wafers, and obtained a premium of 5000 dollars for about 1000 yards of soft wafers in gold leaf, to be presented to the Queen. The wafers are made of butter or virginia cream, and are excellent for eating, having a taste second to none in quality and flavor.

A SHORT SERMON FOR BUSINESS MEN.

TEXT.—“A SCREW LOOSE SOMEWHERE.”

There is a large class of persons in business in every country who have little difficulty in making money, but who never become any richer, and not unfrequently end by becoming insolvents. This particular class are generally well-behaved members of society, and in most cases industrious, and stand well in their respective localities. They appear to make good wages, or do a flourishing business, and are the persons, one would suppose, who would readily accumulate wealth. But they don't succeed; and, the old saw, there is “a screw loose somewhere,” reveals the why and wherefore of their failure. The “screw loose somewhere,” with a large proportion of the individuals referred to, is living too fast. Their business is often excellent—they are considered well-to-do in the world, and handle a good deal of money; but they spend as fast as they make. If they make more, they spend more; but in any event they never accumulate. By efforts to maintain a certain position in society, by indulging in luxuries here, and a little more extravagance there, the fruits of their labor are frittered away. Frequently these persons believe themselves to be making money; but they keep no systematic record of their expenditure, either household or personal. Local bills are seldom paid.
