Municipal milk depots are now common in British municipalities, and the milk is sterilized before issue. This process is, however, held to be bad for the milk, tho existing conditions render it absolutely necessary. But if dairy farms were established on scientific lines, the milk supplied would simply be "modified," not sterilized. In the Battersea district of London, the municipal depot has considerably reduced the infantiue death rate. The introduction of a municipal supply is rendered to the format in the time of Abraham Lincoln. Its form may have changed, but its print still lives in present-day controversy.

it Pattison claims that he did not know where the money was to come from to pay him for getting out of the company, and so did President First-brook, Vice-President King and many directors. Everybody seemed to think that Mr. Stratton was putting up the extra money to get the control of the company, while, as a matter of fact, that money was coming out of the funds of the Home Life. To-day Messrs. Firstbrook and Pattison's subsidiary enterprises will be sifted.

Mr. Pattison's commissions on earlier contracts were first looked into yesterday. It seemed that commissions were credited every month on his personal account. The contract of 1898 was dissected. This contract gave witness 9 3-8 per cent. of all premiums and assessments up to two millions, and 31-8 per cent. over that amount for a period of fifteen years.

When asked by Mr. Tilley what he thought the contract would be worth in 1898, witness answered that he had not considered the worth of the contract until 1905, when he was approached by J. R. Stratton to sell his interest in the Home Life. Negotiations had been going on for several years.

The contract was produced and witness could not say when it was signed, nor why it was dated November when the minute was passed supporting the agreement in June. Mr. Firstbrook, as permanent chairman, also got a contract dated Feb. 14, 1899, altho the minute authorizing the agreement was passed at a family compact meeting of the executive in December.

The first intention of the executive committee was to appoint witness and Firstbrook permanent officials for life, but witness could not remember when the contract was shortened to fifteen years. The contracts were resolved upon at a meeting of the executive, the members of which were Messrs.
