SCOTT'S AWFUL PLUNGE.

A HEADLONG JUMP INTO THE ROSE.

DALE RAVINE.

A Former Toronto Merchant Deliberately

Suicides—One of the Saddest Cases in the History of This City—The Story of a Stroll Which Witnessed the Tragic Act.

James Scott, for many years a dry-goods merchant in Toronto, deliberately succeeded by jumping 120 feet to the ground from the highest of the Rose-dale bridges at the second ravine, at about 11 o'clock on Saturday morning.

Deceased left his home at 90 Carlton street shortly after breakfast and went out presumably for a stroll. His family never saw him alive afterwards.

The suicidal jump was witnessed by several people, who were on the bridge and whose stories show the act to have been premeditated.

When his pockets were searched to discover his identity, he had a paper with a paraphrase of Holy Scripture written in a clear hand on it, and containing the words, "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and, therefore, I am ready to die."

Dr. W. H. Howitt, 100 Carlton-street, an intimate friend of deceased, and who has been his medical attendant for some years, has had Mr. Scott continually under his care for the past 28 months, during which time he has been in a distressed state of mind, but the doctor remarks that latterly Mr. Scott had been much better.

Dr. Howitt is of opinion that deceased was seized with an uncontrollable impulse to jump from the bridge.

Who the Unfortunate Gentleman Was. Mr. Scott was 72 years of age, and came here from Peabody, Scotland, 60 years ago. He was a handsome and dignified old gentleman, always scrupulously dressed, and leading a happy life. His home at 90 Carlton-street is a beautiful place.

He leaves a widow, five grown up children, two sons, James and Robert, and three daughters, one of whom is Mrs. Charles Cockburn. He has been unmarried. Mr. Robert Scott has been in England and sailed on Saturday for Liverpool for New York. He is, therefore, unaware of the sad death of his father.

Mr. Scott was a gentleman of the old school, and in business and financial circles he bore a reputation for unflinching probity. For 40 years he has been in business in Toronto. Years ago the firm was known as Scott & Laidlaw, and more recently as James Scott & Son, the old gentleman's two sons having been taken into the partnership after Mr. Laidlaw's retirement.

Mr. Scott's increasing age prevented him taking a sufficiently active part in the management of the business, and the profits gradually decreased, until a year ago the firm decided to retire. A few months since the stock was sold to W. A. Murray & Co., and Mr. Scott retired. He still had a generous fortune, however, and will leave probably $100,000.

Mr. Scott was a director of several financial institutions in Toronto. He was a director of the Dominion Bank of the Western Bank, North American Life Assurance Company, vice-president of the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, and a member of several charitable and fraternal organizations.

The company's affairs came to a safe hands, as Mr. McPherson is thoroughly familiar with all branches of the insurance industry, and has but few equals in his particular line of business on the continent.

H. A. MASSEY'S FUNERAL.

THE MILLIONAIRE MERCHANT HONOURED IN DEATH.

Imposing Funeral Procession—Crowds Through the Metropolitan Church—Impressive Services—Special Tributes to Mr. Massey's Death—Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir Frank Smith Among the Mourners.

Honored in death was Hart A. Massey, Toronto's millionaire merchant. All sorts and conditions of men, from the Prime Minister of Canada to the foundry apprentice, were present at his obsequies. For many years there has not been such a large funeral in Toronto. Capacious as the Metropolitan Church is, it was not large enough to accommodate the crowds of citizens desirous of attending the funeral services.

Prior to this public function, a private service was held at the late residence of Mr. Massey on Jarvis-street. Only the relatives, the hall-bearers, and a few long and intimate friends were present. Among the latter were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Prime Minister, and Sir Frank Smith.

The service was excellently rendered. As the procession entered the church, Mr. Torrington played the National Anthem. This was followed by Lyte's well-known hymn, "Abide With Me." After an affecting prayer by Rev. Dr. Young, the choir sang, "Brother, thou art gone before us," the words of the late Dean Milman, and the hymn, "The Church Royal, was sung by the choir.

Rev. James Grant, pastor of the Metropolitan Church, founded his address on the words in the burial service taken from the Book of Isaiah: "The Lord's ability, which enabled him to seize opportunities which others regarded as hopeless, and to persevere, power of will, capacity for endurance, formed a combination of qualities which led to his becoming one of the foremost managers in the Dominion. These qualities were largely due to Mr. Massey's heredity.

Mr. Allen proceeded to review the life and career of the deceased, particularly of which have been published. The strong will of H. A. Massey, when he believed himself to be in the right, and his general liberality, that was inherited from his father, illustrations of which Mr. Allen recited. The father threw his son on his own resources, thus instilling the strongest character which was afterwards so grandly developed.

Gen. Grant's life from 7 to 17 years of age was similar to H. A. Massey's in strength, his general business-like qualities, and sterling good sense. Eulogy of his public character and great business and philanthropic enterprises, would, said the pastor, be there out of place; but he would add that H. A. Massey's keen sagacity, his flexible will, and the wisdom that controlled him, all were controlled by a true conscience.
