Exhibitors' Day may be a rather tame affair at the fair grounds, but it is usually the great day of Exhibition days in furs, at Dineens'. This season, it rounds out a fermight of fur-selling which far surpasses the business of any previous year in the experience of this well-known house, and one of the notable features of this year's fur-trade has been the exceptionally large purchases of high grade furs—sealskin and Persian lamb garments—at this early stage of the season. To-night Dineens' remains open until 10 o'clock, and the special prices which are made for to-day in ladies' fur neckwear—scarfs, ruffs, boas and collarctics—should excite a lively interest in these stylish inexpensive little furs.

The English Chief Justice followed the speech of M. Demange with the closest attention. The lawyer gave a very fine performance, so far as the audience was concerned. His voice was beautifully modulated, sometimes soft and persuasive, and at other times sharply augmentative. Finally he filled the room with his stentorian tones as he thundered with indignation at the charges against Dreyfus, the shameful weakness of the prosecution and in denunciation of Esternazy. The gestures and features of M. Demange were equally expressive.
