CHICAGO. — John Cudahy says that grain and provisions will sell lower. He says the foreigner is asking extensions of 30 to 60 days on wheat drafts, and he will not be surprised if there is trouble in collecting on high-priced wheat sold abroad, as there was many years ago. Chicago packers, contrary to the rule, are keeping fully hedged in the provision market, mainly against May delivery.

Chicago Gossip.

Marshall, Spader & Co. wired to J. G.
Beaty at the close: The wheat market has shown a very decidedly strong undertone, partly traceable to muscle, and partly to news. The strength in continental markets, strong Russian news, the latter being that the Russian government had raised interior rail freights to hamper exports, and were also reported to be buying up accumulated stock to supply interior necessities, talk of unfavorable weather in Argentine and some indication of more or less congestion in our December were the main features. One cannot question the merit underlying the wheat situation, but as we have said before this merit, in opposition to money stringency, will be productive of wide, nervous, erratic markets, more attractive for scalping operations than for any permanent confident stand. We think this view still, holds good, and that sales made on these sharp advances will be equally profitable with purchases made on corresponding sharp declines.

Charles W. Gillett to Peter J. Morgan disappointment to local holders, showing only a moderate response to our advance of yesterday. This created a bearish sentiment among pit traders, and as about 90 per cent. of the trading is professional, prices declined about 1c in the early trading. The feature of the day was the continued heavy purchases of December by the same private interests which were prominent as buyers yesterday: Elevator interests bought December and sold May, narrowing the of local cash wheat to relieve the money market.

Corn—Weakness was developed early, owing to lower cables and sympathy with decline in wheat, but cash houses began absorbing offerings at the declines, and as receipts are running very small, a fair recovery occurred. Cash corn was unchanged to it up in the local market and firm to 1c up in outside markets. Argentine shipments are expected to be only 800,000. The Price Current notes generally soft condition of new corn, which will prevent any large movement before the end of the year. The market has had fairly good support the last two days, and unless wheat turns weak I look to see a temporary rally in December and May, but for a long pull believe May is a good sale.

Oats—Prices were influenced chiefly by corn. I see nothing in the near future in corn. I see nothing in the near future in oats except a scalping market. oats except a scalping market.

Ennis & Stoppani wired to J. L. Mitchell at the close:
Wheat—Altho there was some hesitancy and lower prices during the early trading the character of the news, both foreign and domestic, was such as to develop bullish sentiment, which resulted in a fair advance and a firm tone, the market closing near the top. Cash business showed some improvement. Continental markets were very strong and Argentine situation continues serious. From the standpoint of commercial value, based upon actual demand, the cereal is in a very strong position, the only adverse factor being the money situation.

Corn and oats ruled lower, being sold by houses who were supposed to be acting for a large eastern speculator. The buying was scattered. We cannot advise following the short side of coarse grains.
