The storm of indignation raised by the comments published by Miss Laura smith, in The Ladies' Home Journal, respecting the degree of kindness rhown to her during her round of the churches, is still raging. In the first place, Miss Smith's revelations are, we believe, almost at an end. It is to be hoped that they will tend to rouse at least a question in the minds of thinking persons, and lead them to look more closely unprepossessing appearance. In the second, the churches were not designed originally as social clubs, and many of her contentions are scarcely reasonable. Lastly, her work was mething, too. like that of a paid soy. However, the controversy is still stirring in many prominent religious, papers, and diverse views of the subject are taken. The Catholic Monitor takes the occasion to point out that the idea of "social clubs" has superseded that of church in many Protestant institutions, and that fact is the cause of the whole controversy. That there is a degree of truth in this ratement which ought to act as a That there is a degree of truth in this evident.
