To-morrow's Christmas! If it wasn't for the crowds on the street, the decorations and the display of "seasonable" novelties, in the windows, and the overheard or exchanged "Merry Christmas, old man," it would be a little difficult to believe that yesterday wasn't a day toward the fag-end of March. But the observatory officials promised a change during the night, which will freeze things up to-day, and make to-morrow and Monday a real winter celebration.

The holiday rush is on with the railways, and to judge from the statements made by officials, it will be a greater one than has been, altho they admit that it is a little early as yet to make calculations. For the first day of the special rate traffic, however, of the special rate traffic nowever, yesterday more than compares favorably with the volume of incoming and outgoing traffic recorded at the opening last year. To-day it is expected that the Union Station will approach as closely to blockaded conditions as possible with the excellent system of family last the researchers now in years, and ling the passengers now in vogue, and which was not employed a year ago, and which will do away with the unpleasant crowding and confusion of the travel last Christmas.
