BIG NEW YORK FIRE

New York, Feb. 4.—The six-story factory building at 107-113 Grand street, at the corner of Moore street, in the heart of the silk and linen district, was burned today with a loss exceeding $250,000.
Charles Scholtenhouse & Sons, manufacturers of ribbons, suffered a loss of $100,000, fully insured, and Bernhard, Umann & Co., dealers in yarns, embroideries and linens, lost more than $150,000, partly covered by insurance.

The fire was a spectacular one, flames bursting from all the windows within a few minutes after the first alarm was sounded. So many thousands of people were attracted to the scene that police reserved from eight down town precincts had to be summoned. There were a number of narrow escapes, but only two persons, a fireman and a policeman, were hurt, their injuries being slight.

John Maxwell was a passenger to this city from Fredericton this morning.
F. R. Perry returned from Boston today.

JOSEPH McCaffrey HAS WRITTEN TO HIS FAMILY

St. John Man Who Was In Valencia Wreck Sends Home Story of the Disaster—He Denies that There Was Any Cowardice.

Captain John McCaffrey, of the West End, has received from his son Joseph, who was one of the survivors of the ill-fated steamer Valencia, copies of the Seattle Times and the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, which, besides giving a graphic description of the scenes at the time of the terrible disaster, illustrate them by some fine cuts, some being a full page in size.

The former paper publishes an interview with the St. John man. Mr. McCaffrey also sends a copy of his evidence as given at the inquiry. His interview given to the Seattle paper was: "I would like to meet the reporter who said the women were part of the survivors of the Valencia," said J. McCaffrey, of St. John (N. B.), at the Rainer Grand this afternoon. "To my personal knowledge Captain Johnston begged them with tears in his eyes to take a last chance on the last raft that was sent away, but they wouldn't go, and what could we do? Every moment we delayed meant that the raft was liable to be dashed to pieces; so, after the captain and the stewardess had begged the women and children to take a chance and they refused, we who had decided to group this last straw went over the side and were whirled away. All I've got to say about the terrible loss of life is this: When we first struck, Captain Johnston ordered the boats to be lowered to the rail, but he did not intend that they should be sent away from the ship until morning. I haven't the slightest doubt in the world that all would have been saved. At least there would not have been such a terrible loss of life. It is so, the best thing we can do is to hurry away from this part of the country and forget."

Probably the most thrilling picture, and one that gives the best idea of all the fearful hardships endured by the unfortunate survivors, is a quarter-page cut in the special supplement issued by the Seattle Daily Times, which shows a life raft with eighteen people, including the St.
John man, huddled together in tow of a big life boat. The life boat, with its six oarsmen, is having a hard time to make headway in a big sea with its burdensome tow. A glance at the picture shows a pitted sight on the raft. The occupants, with life preservers about them, are bunched together on the more frame that is all that is between them and the sea-less water.

Another picture shows Mr. McCaffrey in a group of five survivors rescued from the life raft. All are just as they were taken off the raft, and the clothes they are stired in are all that they have been able to take away from the Valencia.

Other pictures are a full page one of the passengers being taken off the raft on board the steamer Topaka, which shows them being hoisted aboard the rescue steamer, from the raft, by heavy ropes.
A group picture of the crew of the Valencia and a group of photos of the various vessels that took part in the work of rescue; the steamer Salvor, Lorne and Olsen, all appearing in a clear and distinct manner the scenes enacted at the time and some days after one of the most fearful disasters in modern times.

Joseph McCaffrey's statement at the inquiry is as follows:—
"I was pulling on one of the oars with a poor old fellow whose strength would last but for a few minutes. And then his head would drop on his breast and he would be back exhausted."

"He would work like a madman for a while and his hands would relax their grip. 'Keep on working,' I would urge him. 'If you want to get out of this and reach the ship, pull for God's sake, pull!' Then he would raise his head and look in that manner we succeeded in reaching the boat crew from the Topaka. There were two or three men on the raft who kept up the spirits of their companions by cheering them on and holding every hope of rescue within a short time."

"When we sighted the boat pulling away from the Topaka one fellow on the raft broke forth into song. But the words died in his throat; his heart was too full of sorrow. I don't know the words of that song he sang. I was too stupified to remember."

He asked the court to discredit the evidence of Elliot, which he said was unsupported and unreasonable in view of the action or non-action of every member of the hospital staff.

No date is fixed for the filing of Commissioner Pipes' decision.

It was proved by the evidence, that there were as many great authorities in support of the character of the operation performed on Lively, the medicines used and the medical treatment accorded him, as could be quoted for any other case, that might have been adopted; that while the evidence of Elliot, a patient in an adjacent ward, was not sufficient to show that Lively had been neglected, there was at the same time evidence that Dr. Murray had been in the hospital every day and undoubtedly saw and attended to Lively, and lastly, that if Lively had indeed suffered from neglect and his agonies as he had been represented to have suffered, that this must have been known to almost everybody in the hospital from the superintendent down, and that not the two doctors named but the whole hospital staff must have been called in indeed to have allowed it to go on unheeded and unremedied.

missioner Pipes' decision.
