

"YOU'LL SUFFER ALL YOUR LIFE"

That's What the Doctor Told Him

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him

Chesterville, Ont., Jan. 25th, 1911. "For over twenty years, I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and that I would be a sufferer for the rest of my life."

I doctored with different medical men and tried many advertised remedies, but none of them suited my case.

Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives." I have been using this medicine nearly all the time since, and am glad to say that I am cured. I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible.

I am now seventy-six years old, and in first class health.

Geo. W. Barkley.

In all the world, there is no other remedy that has cured so many cases of so-called "incurable" kidney disease, as "Fruit-a-tives."

This famous fruit medicine acts directly on the kidneys—beating and strengthening them—and ridding the system of the waste matter that poisons the blood.

"PROGRESSIVE" REPUBLICANS IN STATE OF MINNESOTA WILL WORK FOR WILSON

Minneapolis, July 3.—The Minnesota Progressive Republican League will back Woodrow Wilson, Democrat, in his coming campaign, according to Geo. S. Loftus, president of the league, in a statement today.

According to Mr. Loftus, practically all of the members of the executive committee of the league have agreed to this plan and a meeting for formulation will be held here next Saturday night.

"Woodrow Wilson represents our ideal of progressivism," said Mr. Loftus. "There

Good News By RUTH CAMERON

HERE is some very good news that I found tucked away in a corner of my morning paper one day.

"A bill has been introduced into the legislature requiring applicants for marriage licenses, both men and women, to have health certificates dated within ten days.

Heavy penalties are provided for a doctor who falsifies a certificate or for a minister or official who marries a couple without one."

Why do I call that good news? For at least two reasons.

In the first place, because I believe that the passage of such a law as that all over this country would mean one of the biggest possible steps towards a single standard of morality for men and women.

Almost all men, however determined they are to sow their wild oats, in the bottom of their hearts look forward to a home of their own some day.

If these men knew that by their reckless sowing of wild oats they were running the risk of making themselves homeless forever and ever, I think they might be a little less reckless and indifferent.

And, in the second place, I believe that such a law would strike a big blow at one of the most garbled and knotty and diseased "roots" of the divorce evil.

"Make it harder for the wrong people to get married," is coming to be the universal war cry of the forces that are fighting divorce.

And if any class of persons is more thoroughly "wrecked" from a marriageable standpoint, than those who will spread a clean bill of health who would untold suffering in many ways, they must be hard to find.

For the women's club that wants to do something for the improvement of womanhood's status, for the stability of the home and for the prevention of divorce, I can think of no better undertaking than to see what can be done about passing a similar law in their own particular section of the country.

Can you?

And in the meantime why should not such a requirement be made a personal affair? If legislators have decided that conditions are such that legislation of this sort is necessary, doesn't that fact point out their duty to the parents of every "marriageable daughter"?

The father asks his would-be son-in-law about the latter's business prospects, his ability to support the girl he wants to marry. Why not about his physical condition, his prospects of making the girl happy?

No good man who really loved a girl would resent such questioning. He would appreciate its wisdom. It would be only the man who could not show a clean bill of health who would object.

Some friend, I know, is shocked at my touching on this subject and is preparing to take up her pen and tell me "This is a matter we do not discuss in public."

Quite true, my friend. And Oh the tragedies of our silence.

Is no reason for us to join the third party (during the colonial's battle for the Republican presidential nomination, today is President Taft. We will work for Mr. Wilson in the state."

Lansing, Mich., July 3.—Governor Chase S. Osborn, an ardent Roosevelt supporter public presidential nomination, today is believed "that there is no necessity for a new political party." He also stated he hoped Roosevelt would not be a candidate.

"The Laird of Cockpen" Coming to Visit His Brother in Ottawa—An Old Scottish Family

(Copyright, 1914, by the Brentwood Co.)

New York is at present harboring at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, a peer who goes throughout Scotland by the nickname of "The Laird of Cockpen."

His real title is the Earl of Dalhousie, and he is especially known in New York society, than his, for his parents spent much of their time on this side of the water, were familiar figures in Fifth Avenue.

It was on landing at Havre, after a stay of several months in the United States that both died in a Havre hotel, with such dramatic suddenness, within a few hours of another, as to give rise to an unfounded rumor of suicide.

The late Countess of Dalhousie was a remarkably beautiful woman, a sister of the matter as he had not been in the habit of coming to New York.

It was Lady Dalhousie who died first, it is now believed of pneumonia poisoning, and her husband was so affected by the shock, that he succumbed on the same day, presumably of some heart trouble.

They left five small boys, the eldest about ten years of age at the time; the children were brought up with the utmost care and affection by their father's younger brother, the Hon. Charles Ramsay, and by his American wife, Estelle Graham, daughter of the late, William R. Garrison.

She died about five years ago, having had no children of her own, and Charles Ramsay visits New York almost every year, in connection with his American financial interests.

He was subjected soon after his elder brother's death to a most unmerited attack. Some American belonging to the Knickerbocker Club in New York, who had been put up for membership at the Knickerbocker Club in London, had been turned down and, although Ramsay had nothing to do with the matter as he did not belong to the club at the time, yet when proposed for election to the Knickerbocker, he was black-balled as a matter of spite, simply because he was a London clubman.

This created for a number of years afterwards an amount of ill-feeling in England which rendered the election or admission to temporary membership of Americans to the first-class London clubs, a matter almost impossible.

Another brother of Dalhousie was an ardent home ruler, having followed Gladstone when the latter broke took place in the Liberal camp a year before the former's death.

Charles Ramsay, however, on becoming the guardian of his young nephews and the administrator of the Dalhousie estates in Scotland, some 10,000 acres in extent, entered parliament as a Unionist. So well did he manage his ward's property that, although it was heavily encumbered with debt, all the mortgages had been paid off by the time the present Earl came of age, and entered into possession of a clear income of $300,000 a year.

The present Lord Dalhousie is a man of thirty-five, served through the Boer war as a subaltern of the Scots Guards, and is married to a very pretty woman, sister of the present Earl of Ancester, whose wife was Miss Elsie Breeze of New York. He has a son of eight years, who bears the title of Lord Ramsay.

Patrick Ramsay, is in the diplomatic service, and was attached for a time to the British embassy at Washington. Another brother, Alexander, is a lieutenant in the royal navy, and is attached to the staff of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, as A. D. C.

It is mainly for the purpose of visiting him at Ottawa that Lord Dalhousie has just crossed the Atlantic. The youngest brother, Fox Ramsay, is, I believe, a stock broker in London. He was one of the winners, but the other, Ronald, a subaltern of the Scots Guards, disappeared mysteriously from aboard the Hamburg-American liner Cleveland within a day of reaching Plymouth, on his way back to England after an enjoyable visit to the United States.

No one had seen him jump overboard, but a letter found in his cabin addressed to his uncle Charles, bidding him to be well and thanking him in the most touching manner for all that he had done for "his boys," left no doubt as to it being a case of suicide. What cause there could have been for the act remains a mystery, so no monetary troubles or feminine complications were known. He left indeed, some $60,000 deposited in a London bank.

I may mention, as illustrating once more in these letters the peculiar sympathy existing between twins, that Fox was the only one of his brothers to whom the dead man left a message of affection.

The Earl of Dalhousie, whose sobriquet of "Laird of Cockpen" was given him because Dalhousie is situated in the parish of that name, and whose ancestors were so distinguished, is not, as so many people believe, descended from that Marquis of Dalhousie who was such fame as Governor-General of India and conqueror of the Punjab.

That Marquis was the only surviving son of the sixth Earl of Dalhousie, and died without male issue, his Marquisate becoming extinct, while the earldom went to his cousin Fox Ramsay, Lord Panmure, who was secretary of war throughout the greater part of the Crimean conflict. His correspondence was published under the name of "The Panmure Papers" some time ago, and contained many letters addressed to him by Queen Victoria in her own handwriting giving eloquent and sometimes homely expression to her profound concern for the sufferings of her soldiers in the Crimea.

In one letter of Lord Panmure addressed to the generalissimo in the Crimea, and dated from Windsor Castle, he mentions his execution of the telegraph and the newspapers, especially denouncing the pernicious activity of the London Times correspondent at the front, the late Sir William Howard Russell.

This Lord Panmure, who died without issue as the eleventh Earl of Dalhousie, was a man of the most irascible temper, but of sound heart. He was a godson of Charles Fox the statesman, and when a mere schoolboy had espoused his mother's cause in her difference with his father, Patrick Ramsay, is in the diplomatic service, and was attached for a time to the British embassy at Washington. Another brother, Alexander, is a lieutenant in the royal navy, and is attached to the staff of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, as A. D. C.

How bitterly the father hated the son who was the cause of his death, that on recovering from a severe illness, he gave a dinner to his tenants to celebrate the occasion, and proposed this toast: "The disappointed one," referring of course to his eldest son, and the supposed champion of the letter at his escape from death.

An old farmer present, who had a low opinion of his landlord's virtue, contrived the toast in a different fashion, and exclaiming: "I've heard many a queer toast proposed in my day, but this is the first time I've ever been told to drink the health of the devil," drained his glass to the bottom, assuming, of course, that it was the father of evil, and not the son of his host, who had been so grievously disappointed.

Lord Dalhousie has two castles: Dalhousie, in Midlothian, and Brackin in Forfarshire. Both of these places have been in the possession of his ancestors since the twelfth century, the name of Ramsay figuring in well-nigh every page of Scottish history. William de Ramsay was one of the fellow signatories of Robert Bruce's famous letter to the Pope in 1290. Sir Alexander Ramsay fell beside his king at Flodden. Sir George Ramsay was created Lord Ramsay by King James I. of Great Britain, and his son was elevated by Charles I. to the Earldom of Dalhousie.

WHY ALL STOOD IN THE WATER.

In a North of England town there was a shiftless man who would never accept gifts outright, although he was always depending on charity, says Al Fridly in his book, "Through the Mill."

He painted landscapes, and my aunt, when benevolently inclined, would hire him to decorate our walls with rural scenes, highly colored in glaring tints, as if Nature had turned color blind. There were cows in every scene, and Aunt Millie noticed that all the cows were up to their knees in water. Not one stood clear on the vivid green hills.

"Jurey," she remarked to the old man, "why do you always put the cows in the water?"

"This way, Mrs. Brindin," the old artist responded. "You see, ma'am, I never learned to paint hoofs."

Daily Hints For the Cook

GOOD RAISIN BREAD.

Two pounds of seedless raisins, 1 quart of milk, 1 tablespoonful of lard, 2 eggs, 24 pound of sugar, 1 compressed yeast cake, 1 tablespoonful of salt, 1 tablespoonful of powdered cinnamon, and 1/2 cup of sugar.

Bring the milk to the boiling point, remove it from the fire and add the lard. When cool add the yeast cake mixed with salt, a tablespoonful of sugar and enough flour to make a soft batter. Allow to rise over night in a warm place, then mold into loaves. Mix the cinnamon with a little sugar and sprinkle it over the top, then allow to rise again. Bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

MOBILE SPICE CAKE.

One cupful of butter, two cupfuls of pulverized sugar, three cupfuls of flour sifted three times with two spoonfuls of yeast powder, four eggs, 1/4 teaspoonful of each allspice and cloves, one teaspoonful vanilla. Cream the butter and sugar, beat in one egg at a time, put in spices, then milk and flour and yeast-powder. Bake in a loaf or in layers. Put together with a boiled icing made as follows: Two cupfuls of sugar and one cupful of water. Boil until it feathers. Have two eggs beaten stiff. If a little of the sirup is put into the eggs before they are well beaten, it will keep the icing from granulating.
