It would be interesting to those who know something of the history of these big yachts to be told by the Telegraph when and where Shamrock demonstrated a broad reach to be her best point of sailing, as compared with Columbia or any other yacht. But what we are most anxious about is to learn from the Telegraph how a triangular course equilateral, can be laid out, from any given point, so that a vessel sailing over it will the two close reaches on the first two legs and a dead beat on the third. Will the Telegraph please publish a diagram of such a course. If the nautical editor of our big contemporary knew that a vessel must have the wind well forward of the beam to be on a close reach he would not have written such nonsense. There is evidently, only one nautical phrase that the learned St. John editor understands, only one nautical manoeuvre that he can execute properly, and that is—to splice the main brace!

MAX O'RELL ON "WOMAN." If you are bold, never make love to woman taller than you. Looked at rom below you are all right?

GLAD IT'S OVER.

The Pertinent and Impertinent man of the Hamilton Spectator says, in regard to the yacht races that he is giad that it's all over. Of late he doesn't know whether he is shivering his top-sall gaff, splicing his cathead to his mudward bowsprit, jettisoning the main brace receiver, reeding the main boom ratlines, marlinspliding the dolphinstriker's mate, holystoning the windward wake or making a starboard scupper out of the garboard strake of the chading rigging. Glad it's all over.
