Finding these fail, Wholesale Warehouse, she was driven, we are told, "by absolute necessity, to her last course, that of entering different houses as a chambermaid and robbing her employers. She is a pretty and educated woman, and deserves the consideration of the philanthropist rather than the police." Which may be all true enough, although chambermaids, such families as she served, are generally supposed to earn a sufficient livelihood without the necessity of stealing, and even to have time enough for the moderate pursuit of medical knowledge un-Cer difficulties. We have no doubt however that the girl is a fit subject for the consideration of the philanthropist rather than the police, and the more fit because she has beauty and education, or what passes for both in the eyes of the vulgar. O. all the typ s of wretchedness that ask for aid in this city, the most pitiable and nearest akin to crime is that shabby gentility which asks it most seldom. The beggar, clamorous at the door of the beggar, clamorous at the door of the soup-house, is rather vain of her skinny neck and filthy hands; or if she be a street beggar, her rags are an indispensable part of her capital. But to a young girl like this gentle burglar, with a face which makes her think herself the equal of every woman who drives past her in which makes her think herself the equal of every woman who drives past her in her carriage, with enough smattering of knowledge to make her attempt or chatter about attempting the role of a womandoctor, with not sense enough to do honest work and take honest pay for it—what misery and temptation he in every shabby garment and social slight. There are thousands and tens of thousands of such women in New York and in every city and town through the country. It is city and town through the country. It is from their ranks, not from those of the beggar woman, that the steady supply comes to fill our brothels and the wards set apart in our jails for female sharper, and thieves.

We do not mean to argue from this that beauty or education, however coarse or poor in quality, is to blame, or to put a premium on rags or dirt. The fault lies quite apart from these. Yesterday w. saw a middle-aged woman, apparent Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine.

Flower Stands, &c. about a mile distant from their house, saw what had been done, and became so enraged that they broke the headstones, and acted so furiously that Maj. Ferris and his man had to abandon the attempt of removing the stones that day.

On the 18th inst., however, Major Ferris and a force of men numbering twelve or fifteen, again repaired to the ground for the purpose of removing the fine monument, costing about $400, erected by Major Ferris and brother and other relatives, for which the Taylors had never contributed anything. While engaged in the work the "Taylor Brigade" made their appearance, bent on a battle or a raid. An altercation ensued, hot words followed fast and furious, and then the Taylor force began to smash things generally, during which one of the women seized a spade and chipped off the raised letters on the monument's base.

This the Ferris blood could not endure,
