A majority went to bed at 9 o'clock. A majority of the cases that sought relief at this establishment had used all the other means except the slapping; that is to say, had lived on plain food and much in the open air. It was the slapping, the pounding with the fists, kneading with the fist, sometimes with the fists of an attendant, that cured these people, for cured they certainly were. Marvelfor cured they certainly were. Marvel ous cures were effected at this establish After the death of the doctor ment. After the death of the unctor some of the patients felt themselves absolved from the obligation and one of them described the treatment to me. In every case of indigestion, no matter what may be its character, slapping the stomach or bowels with the fists of the hands on rising in the morning, four hours after breakfast, and in the evening on going to bed, is excellent treatment aut conceive of a case of chroni indigestion which such manipulation would not relieve. If the patient be so weak that he cannot perform these slap pings or kneadings upon his own person, the hand of a discreet assistant should be employed. It is marvellous how the body, the stomach, for example, which. when these manipulations are first prac-ticed, may be so very tender that the slightest touch can bardly be borne—it is marvelous how in two or three week borne without suffering. If you have a pain in side or across the chest, percus-But constipation, dyspepsia, torpidity of liver and other affections of the abdo al viscers are relieved more surely and completely than any other class of affections by percussion, kneading, &c. Such treatment comes under the head of counter-irritation. A new circulation of counter-irritation. A new circulation is established in the part near the points of suffering and congestion. Beside this, especially in abdominal troubles the manipulation appeals directly to the contractility of the weak relaxed vesselin the affected part. A horrible accident, in which a littl three years old girl was tortured to death by burning, is recorded in Tuesday'. London "Advertiser":—We have to record to day one of those sad colamities which it is painful to read, and even think of, the death by burning of a little girl only three years of age. Last even ing Mrs. Howard, an occupant of a portion of the officers' quarters, went from her place for a few moments, leaving her little girl alone in the house When she returned she was horrified to find the little creature enveloped in flames her entire clothing blazing fiercely about her body and limbs, rendering her frantic with dreadful pain. Quickly as possible Mrs. Howard quenched the fire, which was rapidly burrying on the death of the child and by the kind assistance of Mr. Grant, the Hospital Steward, the fferer's wounds were dressed. Plock was immediately summoned, be found he could do little more to ear her sufferings, and she sank gradually until 2 o'clock this morning, when deat' mercifully put an end to her torture. I is supposed the victim, in the absence of her mother, had by some means obtained matches, and lighting them at the stove, set her clothes on fire. The sympathy of the neighbourhood is with the afflicted people.

Four cases of suicide are reported in the English paper received by the last mail. Mrs. Louisa Tyler, the wife of a lanker, living in Oxford-terroce, Hyd Park, was sometime ago seized with mental aberration, which rendered it advisable to place her under restraint. She occupied a room on the third floor of the residence named, and during the absence of her nurse threw herself from the bedroom window. As she fell, her head struck on the area railings, from teps. LIVINGSTONE

The Standard newspaper of this city publishes an article in its issue this morning which is evidently inspired by Lieutenant Dawson, defending the latter in his action attacking the Royal 0 0 Geographical Society and corroborating Mr. Stanley, the commander of the Herald search expedition for Livingstone in Africa. The press writer shows also the Geographical Society wanted less to help Livingstone than to obtain 0 0 1 hold of the parrative of his discoveries in order to manipulate the papers as to suit themselves, the members the body.
LIVINGSTONE'S LETTER TO LORD CLAS

The Standard gives an extract from letter of Dr. Livingstone, addressed to Lord Clarendon, which reads as fol-

I will, after all my care, risk health -even life. It is not very inspiriting to find 200 miles tacked on the north west end of Nyassa; then 200 miles perched on an upland region, and passed over some three thousand feet higher than the rest of the lake. We shall probably hear that the author of this feat of fancyography, claims, therefrom to be the theoretical discoverer of the source of the Nile. My imperfect longitude sketches lead some persons to longitude sketches lead some persons to desecrate perfect ones from the Observatory; thus I received only a giggle. The seventh showed a few minutes west. utes west. The six were thrown aside and the seventh adopted, because a Portuguese said he "thought the spotmight be about midway between Ambaca and the sea." Ambaca he had never seen. The folly of intermeddling is apparent in other freaks, one specially immoral where performed, and my immoral where performed, and my gentle remonstrance against the desceration which my positions have suffered is, probably unknown to the Council; but that is all the more a reason why I should adhere to my resolution to be a guardian of my own observations until published. I regret this because the upsetting of a cance or anything hap pening to me might lead to the entire loss of my discoveries.

When he received payments against his letter of credit, which were duly inscribed, he, by means of chemical solution, obliterated all traces of the writing, and the letter of credit appeared as if not a single payment had been made against the $5,000 which he had paid to the bank for his letter of credit. In Montreal he was considerably ahead of the money he had paid, and after obtaining funds at other places he had obtained $5,000 masses than he was entitled to when he reached Savannah.
