Now this is a problem!

In theory, this bridge is supposed to be high enough to allow this truck to pass beneath, but in practice, either the bridge came up short or the truck came up tall. The truck was carrying a new hopper destined for Dofasco in Hamilton. I had to back away from an underpass in the Southdown Traffic circle and proceed along the North Service Road. The miscalculation resulted in traffic being held up by police for about 20 minutes.

Phone callers don't volunteer details

The organizer of a telephone - solicitation campaign operating over the last few weeks in Mississauga and Brampton was angered by a Times story on his group last week, and says 50 cents from the sale of each item (that is, $7.75 for 40 garbage bags) is sent to a legitimate Montreal charity.

Handicapped Opportunity Program consisted of one handicapped woman making sales calls from her home. He adds that CCC once had four or five such people working in these positions and is now looking for more.

Receipts from these sales are not tax deductible. CCC also solicits sales for the Handicapped Opportunity Program and the Student Opportunity Program.

Students are paid $2.85 an hour when using telephones and on a $1.50-per-item commission basis when soliciting door-to-door.

Better deal urged for ethnic children

The CCC and Associates Inc. Toronto manager, Ariel Betancourt, says that the National Handicapped Recreation Development Committee is a separate group that has nothing to do with his organization.

Four new names have been submitted to city council's general committee for citizen representation on the task force: Father Philippe LeBlanc, Cliff Giles, Valentine Cato and G. D. Nadkarni.

He said that CCC is a merchandising organization that enters into a contractual relationship with groups that want to raise funds. Telephone callers say they are calling for the National Handicapped Recreation Development Committee and are selling garbage bags, cleaning fluid, bath oils and shampoo to raise funds.

Many ethnic complaints from Mississauga people are already documented in the Pitman report on race relations and to duplicate its work would make the task force the "laughing stock of public opinion here," Pinto said.

Betancourt admits, however, that the callers do not volunteer the information that only 50 cents from each item, not that the caller works for CCC.

The task force has voted to receive briefs from Mississauga residents. Briefs from citizens or groups are to be submitted at Mississauga City Hall by the end of August.

Toronto Better Business Bureau president Paul Tuz told The Times last week that CCC is typical of several merchandising companies that use charitable - sounding copyrighted names in their telephone sales efforts.

He says that some profits are sent to legitimate charities, but that the amount is generally minimal when compared to the high prices charged for the products.

Betancourt says that for the week starting March 27, CCC sold a total of 135 items in the Brampton and north Mississauga area resulting in a $67.88 cheque being sent to the National Handicapped Recreation Development Committee in Montreal.

He said there was a "lot of hostility" in black youths and added new immigration laws were causing a "lot of tenseness."

Landed immigrants have to apply to bring over family members on compassionate grounds, he said.

He says the authority's original offer was for 2.2 per cent or 12 cents per hour and has subsequently risen to 4.6 per cent.

In the following weeks, this figure rose to $228.06, representing the sale of some 456 items over the

Students get too much

The 47 student workers hired this summer by the Region of Peel are being paid too much money, according to Mississauga Councillor Fred Hooper.

Most of the 47 students are paid between $4.75 and $5.81 an hour with just one, a social worker with the region's social services department, being paid the high rate of $7.81 an hour.

He was disturbed by a report to the region's administration and finance committee on Thursday that showed student workers are being paid between $3.72 and $7.81 an hour.

University students employed in their first work term for the region receive 20 per cent less than union scale. During their second work term they receive 10 per cent less than union scale and during their third and fourth work terms are paid full union rates.

Hooper says there is no need to pay them more than $3.25 an hour.

The report from Stan Craig, Peel's personnel director, shows that the bottom rate was being earned by just two student workers, one at the Sheridan Villa seniors' home in Mississauga and the other a clerical worker at a daycare centre.
