

49/

C 34659

Its remark on the possible conditions of capital and society at the time it is ^{being} called into play, we are persuaded to give up the hunt here, and with Professor Marshall cease to look for a thing which "from the nature of the case cannot exist" This may be added, however, that where the "entrepreneur" is to be a salaried official a careful study of averages ~~must~~ might aid us in determining what salary he would be likely to receive, but it would not tell us how much of the surplus gain would remain over and above that salary for to the capitalists who seated in cushioned chairs are debating whether or not it is possible to secure ^{in his position} as good a man at a less price.

W. L. Mackenzie King.

University of Chicago.

June 3rd / 1897.

W. L. Mackenzie King Papers
Volume C-43

PUBLIC ARCHIVES PUBLIQUES.
CANADA