—The young man who wants to get up with the sun must not sit up too late with the daughter.

—“Why should we celebrate Washington's birthday more than mine?” asked a New York teacher. “Because he never told a lie!” shouted a little boy.

—Young gent (who has been away from home some time). “Well, cook, and how are you?”

Cook. “Only moderate, sir—only moderate; the fact is I often wish I was dead.”
Young Gent. “I'm sorry to hear that; but you should mind what you say, cook; you know it might be ‘out of the frying-pan into the fire.’”

—“Don't you sing, Mr. Stubbs?”

“Well, ah, no—I don't.”

“But all your people do.”

“Well, you see, I got no voice like the rest of them. It isn't my fault; I wasn't consulted. If I'd had a voice in the matter—er—” (getting mixed) “I'd have had one.”
