PARIS HORSE THIEF HAS POLICE BEATEN. Had been in Brantford, But Disappeared Taking Precaution Against Capture

While a farm hand is driving around the country with a stolen horse and buggy, the county police are hunting him without any success.

On July 30th information came from Paris that a black mare, four years old, 15 hands high and weighing 1,000 lbs., fine-boned, good driver valued at $225, had been stolen there.

The police are very anxious to get this man, but cannot find any trace of him.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—Pitcher Ed Reulbach, the last of the staff except Overall, who helped win pennants for the Chicago Nationals, was traded today by Manager Evers to Brooklyn by Pitcher Ed. Stack.

LA GRANGE, Ga., Aug. 6.—Engaged to 25 men, followed in five elopements and twice married, is a record which Mrs. Gussie Mashburn, aged 17, declares qualifies her as an expert.

As such she says a marriage is not legal if the bride answers "no" when the justice asks her if she "will love, cherish and obey."

Mrs. Mashburn admits she was married to C. W. Smith, aged 47, a farmer, Jan. 23 last, and that she has not been divorced.

THE CHARGE against her is bigamy. "I've got the dope on winning men," she declared in jail, "but Jack Mashburn really is the first to 'jake me going'."

"I thought it all a game until I got in love with him. No girl should marry a man that she cannot love and was his dishes at the same time."

"I've been engaged to more than 25 men, and have had a cartload of diamond rings and I ought to know."

ACID BOTTLE IS FOUND NEAR ROPE

A strike which was unsuccessful and ended in the laying off of all union men working on the job of the trouble. Gamble was on the scene in the interests of the Structural Ironworkers' Union.

The prisoner is a small, thick-set individual with rugged features and reddish brown hair. He sat near his counsel throughout the trial, and appeared quite unconcerned.

The original charge against him was that of damaging a rope used by ironworkers on a bridge under construction. Chief Inspector William Greer, of the provincial police, amended it yesterday by placing a value of over twenty dollars on the hemp, thus making it an indictable offence.

The maximum penalty is two years' imprisonment.

One of the chief witnesses heard yesterday was William Black, engineer of the derrick working on the Dixie job. Under examination by Col. J. E. Farewell, County Crown Attorney, he said he knew Gamble as organizer for the ironworkers and had seen him at Dixie Hollow on June 16, the day the crime is believed to have been committed.

A man named McKegg was with him. As he and his fireman, Job Jordan, had orders to keep an eye on strangers, witness had watched him from the window of the compressor car. He believed the prisoner was there on business for the union, and had seen other men around in a similar capacity.

"Where did the prisoner and his partner go?" asked Col. Farewell. "They went right down the road past the compressor car to a point about 100 yards away, where there were a couple of boxes and a coil of rope."

"What did he do?" "He sat down on the coil of rope and remained there for about a minute. I could see his hands moving over the rope."

"I saw something that looked like a bottle over his shoulder."

"Were you suspicious of him?" "Made Him Suspicious."

"Yes, I had been told to keep my eye on him, and when I saw him down there I got out and walked towards him. When he saw me coming he threw some sticks or stones towards the place where the bottle was picked up."

Gamble's Movements. In his evidence Black testified that McCuaig walked ahead, but Gamble sat on a coil of 1 1/2-inch new hemp rope. He saw Gamble moving his hands but was unable to detect what he was about.

Gamble then threw something on the ground, and began to throw stones towards the spot. Black paid no further attention towards the incident until June 25th, when the gang was clearing up preparatory to moving to another piece of work.

When they came to lift the rope, Armstrong called his attention to the fact that the coil was stained. He thought by the weather. Black examined other coils but found no discoloration, and then recalled the occasion when Gamble was there.

They looked in the direction where he had seen something thrown, and found Gamble had apparently cast some stones. They found a broken whiskey flask and later on a glass stopper that fitted it. So far as he knew the coil had not been touched between June 16 and June 25.

"Had you been cautioned to keep your eyes open on that day?" asked Mr. L. S. Cuddy, who was conducting the case for Mr. Dewar.

"I had been told to watch and see that they did not do any damage to the derrick car," replied Mr. Black.

Continuing the witness said he had no conversation with Gamble with Gamble. He had frequently seen delegates from the union around the work talking to the men. Mr. Cuddy tried to shake the witness' evidence that as Gamble was about three hundred feet from him it was not possible to tell what he threw from his hand, but Black was positive that it was the bottle.

Gamble Threw Something. Mr. Job Jordan corroborated Black's evidence as to the movements of Gamble and McCuaig.

"Did you see him do anything?" asked Col. Farewell.

"I saw him sitting on the rope with his head bent."

"Did you see him do anything later when he stepped up?" "I saw him throw something out of his hands, and he threw a stone or something similar towards that particular spot."

Spot Unsafe to Use. The damaged rope had been intended for a scaffolding support for the riveters, said Mr. Alex. Armstrong. The bridge was over 90 feet in height. The damage to the rope by the acid made it unsafe to use, and it would have been dangerous to use for a scaffold where men were working.

The grass around where the coil rested was dead or burned, and the enclosing sack of burlap was damaged.

Samples of rope cut from the coil were identified by Provincial Inspector Greer and Provincial Inspector Boyd. Mr. Greer said the coil was so badly damaged that a large wedge-shaped piece on one side was entirely eaten through.

Mr. L. J. Rogers of the Provincial laboratory analyzed the rope and the bottle and stopper. He found sulphuric acid on the rope, and traces of the acid on the bottle and stopper. Mr. Greer said DeShayes was sure he would not take a chance with the damaged rope. Gamble had solicited him to join the union, promising that he would get more money.
