It is declared that Magill's present wife was formerly Miss Fay Graham, a stenographer, who lived with the Magill family. Magill's first wife died of strychnine poisoning.A note was found on Mrs. Magill's bed saying that she had committed suicide. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of suicide, and the case was dropped until it was learned that Magill and Miss Graham were married on July 5th, in Denver. The early marriage of the widower called attention to the case, and warrants for the arrest of Magill and his second wife were issued. Miss Graham who is 19 years old, worked in the bank and lived with the Magill family. Magill and his wife deny that the first Mrs. Magill suffered any harm

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., July 15-The outburst of a volcano on the Peninsula Kamschatka on February 18 last threw the whole country ino utter darkness for more than 48 nours and resulted in starving of scores of natives, according to the officers of the Barkentine "S.N. Castle," which reached this port last evening direck from Okhotsk Sea. The natives, some of whom could speak English, told Captain Pederson and his men that they had no knowledge of the terrible storm that had come upon them. They knew only that while they were crossing the valleys in the first flash of spring that clouds of dust fell upon them followed by utter darkness that continued most hot, fell about them and there of them had succumbed to their hard with provisions, which the suffering natives said would suffice to keep them on the way to Petropavlovsky.
