The Great cause of Human Misery

WE have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c, resulting from excesses.

☞ Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

☞ This Lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous, and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich, glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

PHOSFOZONE!

The new Medicinal Combination, for Stomach, Heart & Liver Complaints.

Montreal, March, 1877.

MESSRS. EVANS, MERCER & Co.

Gentlemen,—Having taken the "Phosfozone" for general debility and over-taxation of the brain, I think it only fair and just to bear my testimony to its beneficial effects. It was merely an experiment on my part, lacking all faith in the preparation, but I at once, after a few doses, experienced a pleasant effect which caused me to continue its use, and is is, I think, the great Desideratum required by all business men, particularly those of sedentary habits, and well adapted for strengthening weak and nervous constitutions.

Yours truly, R. S. LATHAM,

Turkish Cruelties.

SPEECH BY MR. GLADSTONE.

The following is a portion of a recent speech:

In the first place, a very large portion of the evidence upon this subject has consisted of accounts sent home by the Turkish Government. Now, I must tell you advisedly and deliberately that nothing that is asserted by the Ottoman Government should be believed for a moment (hear, hear) unless and until it be corroborated from other sources. (Hear, hear.) I do not say that lightly. I myself have proved in print the systematic, wholesale falsehood which has proceeded from that Government (hear, hear) and I am astonished when I see its statements sent home by the British Ambassador as if they were documents that could weigh with a reasonable man. (Hear, hear.) The history of the Bulgarian outrages last year—not the mere cruelties committed, but the conduct of the Turkish Government about them—absolutely settles the question that no belief should be given to what is asserted by the Turkish Government, because it so asserted. (Hear, hear.) The next thing that is quite clear is that wholesale outrages are committed. I will divide those. I speak for the moment of those that are committed by the irregular forces of the Turks, especially by that race of men who are called Circassians, with respect to whom I must say that while among the Turks and Mohammedans generally we meet with many cases—and thank God for it—of humanity—bold and self-sacrificing humanity—during the sixteen or eighteen months that have elapsed since the Bulgarin outrages broke out, we have read hundreds of accounts of thousands of outrages prepetrated by Circassians; and I for my part, with grief I say it, have never come across a single notice of an act of leniency or humanity on the part of one of those wretches—("hear, hear, and shame,")—and the name of the Circassians, unless there be a great change in this respect, will be handed down with lasting infamy. (Cheers and shame.) While the Turkish Government has been launching wholesale accusations of cruelty on the part of the Russians, what has happened to themselves? For the first time as I believe in history, they have received from Germany, from the German Government, an official rebuke for the outrages committed by their army. (Hear, hear.) Now, the German Government has a character to lose—(hear, hear)—and they would not dare to administer such a rebuke except after a full examination of the facts, and full conviction on their part. Now, that is the next fact I would advise you to lay to heart—that, so far as we are acquainted — because the official documents have not been published—the Turkish Government, knowing pretty well the German Government, has not ventured, in dealing with that Government, to deny the charges which had been preferred against it. (Hear, hear.) It has gone to work in the old way, and said, "Oh, yes, we will print accounts on the Geneva Convention, and all the good rules, and we will cause copies of these accounts to be distributed amongst the men, and it will be all right for the future." ("Hear, hear," and a laugh.) However, next you may have heard of the report of Colonel Wellesley. You ought to know who Colonel Wellesley is. He has been for several years, I think not less than seven or eight years, if not more, military attache at St. Petersburg. He knows the Russians well, and I, from the recollection of the time I was in office, can bear testimony to Colonel Wellesley as a man of the highest honour, of the highest professional character, and the highest intelligence. (Hear, hear.) Well, Col. Wellesley has written home a despatch which you, probably have seen printed in the newspapers, stating that he being in the Russian camp, not having been to the scenes where those atrocities are stated to have been committed, but having constantly had the opportunity of communications from all manner of people who had visited them, has arrived at a full and deliberate conviction that upon the whole the humanity of the soldiers of the Russian army is not to be impeached. (Hear, hear.) Well, that is Colonel Wellesley's conviction. I do not want to exaggerate his words; and I have not got the paper with me. But that is Colonel Wellesley's conviction, and what he says is this—that the evidence, of course, is negative evidence; those with whom he has conversed say, "We have been at the place and never heard any one of these things, and all we have seen has been directly opposite." (Hear, hear.) Now Colonel Wellesley does not say that there may not have been particular outrages by particular people. What he says is this, that he is convinced from the testimony of gentlemen with whom he has communicated under circumstances of great advantage that there has been none of those wholesale dealings—none of that general cruelty—which you have seen in many newspapers constantly imputed to the Russian army as a body. (Hear, hear.) The Russians are not particularly popular in this country. At the same time, gentlemen, there is one thing that is a great deal better than popularity, and that is justice. (Cheers.)

REMEDY FOR BED BUGS.—A correspondent writes to the British Medical Journal as follows: "The remedy for bugs in hospitals is a bug-trap made by boring a series of holes in a piece of wood with a gimblet, and placing this under the mattress of each cot. The piece of wood is to be placed periodically into a basin of boiling water. This is an Indian hospital plan."

THE Governor-General of Canada, while at Manitoba, visited an orphanage and received an address of welcome from eleven little inmates of different nationalities, each speaking in her native tongue.

Ludwick's Umbrella.

For the Post.

Ludwick McNab of Moncton went driving the other day. The sun was very hot and Ludwick, being a man of resources, determined to take shelter under his umbrella. So he carefully jerked it out from its resting place at his feet and boldly shoved it up. Now, Ludwick's horse was a horse of spirit. He saw that umbrella, and being, as I have said, a horse of spirit he considered it his duty to run. He ran. Ludwick grabbed the reins peacefully and began to consider. The exigencies of the case demanded the sacrifice of either wagon or umbrella, and that is why he considered. He had no time to lower his umbrella and besides he couldn't lower it if he had time. But Ludwick was not a man to be overcome by difficulties. He concluded to let the umbrella go and save the carriage, and so he let it go. Now, umbrellas as class are perverse, and Ludwick's umbrella was no exception to the rule. Besides, it was an old umbrella, had done Ludwick good service, and objected to being unthankfully cast off in this extremity. It sailed forward on an opportune breeze and carefully hooked its little handle in the flying harness in the vicinity of the horse's tail. This refreshing shade from the burning sun seemed to inspire additional vigor in the horse's heels. He struck out with cool precision and soon demolished the vehicle; and while he (the horse) tore off with the umbrella at a tremendous rate, Ludwick calmly sat down on the road to muse. In the meantime the horse made wild passes at the umbrella, but in vain. That umbrella was now master of the situation, and kept at a safe and dignified distance from his heels. Some friends stopped the horse and led him back. Ludwick had gathered up a few of the largest bits of wood and iron, and was patiently waiting for the horse to bring the umbrella back, which he did; and not a rib of it was broken.

Ludwick now takes a man with him to hold the umbrella when he goes out to ride.

WILHELM.

LEWIS MYERS, a county treasurer, was found gagged in his office in Wapakoneta, Ohio, one morning. The safe had been opened, and $27,000 in public money taken. Myers said he had been seized by four masked ruffians, who threw a blanket over his head, and, with a gag in his mouth, conveyed him in their arms to his office, where they compelled him by torture to open the safe, after which they carried off the money. This story was believed by the villagers, who had such implicit confidence in the honesty of Myers that a hint of of his complicity called out violence. The Commissioners immediately offered a reward of $5,000 for the robbers and money, to which Myers subsequently added $2,000. A clear-headed detective took hold of the case, and a result of his work is the arrest of Myers as the thief.

SIR BERNARD BURKE, Ulster king-at-arms, writes to a Paris paper concerning the vexed question of MacMahon's ancesters: "Ireland is too proud of the great names she has contributed to the military glory of France, such as Sarsfield, Mahony, Thomond, and MacMahon, not to be interested in establishing their Irish descent. Now, Mahon, second son of Mortogh O'Brien, King of Ireland, who died at Lismor in 1119, and was great-grandson of the famous Brian Boroimhe (killed 1014, on defeating the Danes at Clontarf), founded the MacMahon branch chiefs of Corcayiskin and Clonderalaw, county Clare. These MacMahons were the ancestors of Jean Baptiste MacMahon, the Marshal's grandson, who became Seigneur of Eguilly, and who by a document, dated 1749, established his descent from the O'Briens, Kings of Ireland."

AN EMPHATIC ORDER.—Sir Edmund Cox, the fourteenth baronet, died last week in the eastern Township of Quecbec, at the age of eighty. He had served many years ago in the Eighty-seventh Royal Irish Fusileers, and like so many of his brother soldiers, settled on his half pay in Lower Canada. It was of the Colonel that they told the story of his vain attempt to give the command for a feu de joie to a squad of Canadian militia on the Queen's Birthday—this was before the present militia system had been adopted. He stammered, and got irremediably stuck on "Fire," and after crying "F-f-f-f!" until he was red in the face, nobly surmounted the difficulty by shouting, "Shoot, you d——d fools—you know what I mean."

A MAN who saw the partial destruction of the Omaha bridge by a cyclone describes it as a dense black cloud coming down stream, carrying forward a water column standing on the river with its head in the clouds. In front the air is filled with hail, streams of fire run along the iron bars and columns of the bridge; but the moment the whirling water column strikes it the whole is lit up by a blinding electric glare, the bridge varnishes, shoots up to a great height above the piers, and then is dashed with inconceivable velocity back into the river. Large stones are thrown out of the riprapping, and shoot up perpendicularly sixty feet to the top of the railroad grade.

NITRO-GLYCERINE by its instantaneous action, will break rocks by the resistance of an inert column of air above it. Not so with powder; a pound exploded on a sheet of glass will not fracture it. Tons may be exploded in a powder house and not injure the side walls if the roof is only light. It burns so comparatively slow that the air has time to move away, and is felt as a strong blast only.
