Truth and Error

The power of Error. Sum their victories up,

And balance them with virties, we shall see

To keep a record of its own misdeeds,

Which of the two is mightier conqueror

The glorious battle in her dear behalf

But Error's victories are sooner won.

And gains the battle, oft without a scratch;

For Error crowns her generals ere they die,

Exaits them-first to heroes, then to gods,

And swears for ever after by their names.

And Error, though it lives luxuriantly,

But blessings on the Truth, it prospers still,

Lives fast, and grows decrepit, and expired
