A strange account is published of the doings of Mesars. Gilbert, U'Meally, and their reguish companions five in number, in the township of Canowindra, Bathurst, New South Wales. According to "promise," five of these facetious thieves entered the place on the afternoon of the 10th of October. Having put up their horses they went to work. They first cleared out the pusses and tills of the town; and then, with a 'mirable delibeation, adjourned to the principal into and took tea with the landloid saister and (according to the correspondent of the Batharst Times) with the two Misses Flanagam. The refreshment over, and Mr. Gilbert having been soothed with a tune on the piano by Miss Flanagam, he issued invitations to the neighbors to a ball to be given at his own expense at his hotel. The citizous, their wives, and daughters, assembled of course. Dancing commenced at nine o'clock, and continued until an early hour next moraing. The utmost decorum prevailed, 'and,' says the correspondent aforenaid, 'not a low or improper word' was heard which could call ablush to the fair cheeks of the Flanagans. The cream of the jest lay in the fact that a certain constable Skyes officiated as master of the ceremonies, and robbers Burke and O'Meally, incredulous or defiant of gallows, stood at the door on behalf of the host Gibert, to receive the guests. 'Roars of laughter' rewarded the robbers' account of their schievements. The feativities over and the guests returned home, the bush-rangers s'ept al fresco in the paddock opposite, and in the morning departed. The next day, according to another version, they returned for more grog, more piano, and more Flanagan, and for three days kept possession of the town hip of Canowitals and all work Warranted Andread and the preservation of the flanagan, and for three days kept possession of the town hip morning departed. The next cay, second to another version, they returned for more grog, more piano, and more Flanagan, and for three days kept possession of the town hip of Canowindra, robbing and making prisone second through. Such by latest such the position and prospects of Gillert and his merry men. £200 is now offired by the tardy Government as a reward for their apprehension, but no arrests are as yet made.

BANDOM PICKINGS. The editor of the Hartford 'Times' found

The editor of the Hartford "Times" found throat onder his door a doy or two since, the following, written in zigazg line, evidently with a lump of charcool, upon a piece of white paper, and purporting to be copied from the Know Nothing Almanac of 1859:

Irish Mother—'Arrah Johany, and where have yees bin, so long?'
Native Son—'Wby, me and the rest of the boys have been licking an Irishman.'

Mother—'Wait ye apalpeen till yer daddy gits home—you'll be after catching it!'
Son—'Oh, he be blowed! That's the man we've licked?'
