The Four British Belles

SCOTCH-IRISH MILITARY ACT.
Miss Evelyn Keen, the leading lady of the Four British Belles, has a delightful programme arranged for tonight. Their opening number in Scotch costume, "The Bonnie Bonnie Maggie, I'm Off to the War," with Scotch dances, an Irish song, "Peggy the Pride of the Mill," with Irish jig in Irish character costume. A beautiful ballad by Miss Webster, this talented young lady has a wonderfully fine voice. The great military number in new and handsome costumes, "I Could Love a Soldier," with dance. All fine new songs and dances. Every one is delighted with this clever quartette, and the four British Belles are chided as one of the very best lady troupes in England. Mr. Rossiey has certainly got the right people in the Four British Belles. The great Vitagraph feature to-night, "Adam and Eve," a big two reel feature, and others. Surely a great show and all new and up to the minute.

Grand Performance

AT NICKEL THEATRE — NO ONE SHOULD MISS IT.

The Nickel Theatre continues to lead in the excellence of its pictures, and its patrons are many because they know it is the best, and nothing but the best will be shown there. The Nickel is the home of perfect pictures. By reference to our advertising columns to-day it will be noticed that another elaborate and interesting entertainment has been prepared. The two reel film, "The Escape of Jim Dolan," is highly sensational from start to end and will afford pleasure and satisfaction to all. It is acted by the Selsky artists and is one of the cleverest and best ever seen at the Nickel.

"Robert Hall's Ambition" is a picture showing film ingratitudes, such as is often seen in every day life. The Vitagraph artists appear in no less than three different films this evening. Their work is of the highest class and patrons can rest assured of something good. Another great feature of this evening's programme is the showing of the "Buddist Temple."

Mr. De Witt C. Cairns will sing the patriotic song, "The Veteran," Wednesday there will be another big Vitagraph show, "Back to Broadway" with pretty Anita Stewart in the leading role.

A Summer Tale.

"You look irritated this evening." "I am, when I see you." "I always suffer from heat rash." "I am liable to heat rash, too, but I never irritate me; it never has since I began to use Zylex, which at once allays the irritation, physical and mental. And I find Zylex Soap with the Ointment so far to prevent heat rash altogether."

Zylex sells at 50 cents a box; Zylex Soap at 25 cents a cake, at our Drugstore.

Zylex—London—171, 173, 175, 177.

Farewell Week.

Miss Alice Clark, the charming prima donna, who has delighted so many with her exquisite singing during the past seven weeks, is entering upon her farewell week at the popular Crescent Picture Palace, as she leaves to fill engagements in Halifax, St. John, N.B., and Montreal. All who have not heard Miss Clark should not fail to do so during the remaining week of her engagement. To-day Miss Clark will sing "When The Apple Blossom Time in Normandy" and "Beautiful Lady," waltz song from the opera, "Pink Lady."

"The Jews Christmas," a feature in three reels, is a dramatic masterpiece, acted by the best artists. "Conscience" is a powerful modern story that is sure to please all who attend the Crescent to-night.

Syrian Wedding

AT BELL ISLAND.
Word was brought to us this morning by Mr. J. A. Basha of a pretty Syrian wedding in the R. C. Church at Bell Island, the Rev. Father McGrath officiating. The groom was Mr. Simon Basha, of Curling, and the bride was Miss Anna Basha, daughter of Mr. John Basha. The groom was supported by Mr. Tuma, and the bride was attended by Mrs. Joseph Basha. The bride was attired in a pretty costume of white and carried flowers and was given away by her uncle, Mr. Joseph Basha. After the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large congregation, a reception and an entertainment was held.

At the College Hall.

At the service in the Methodist College Hall last evening, special mention of the passing during the week of Mr. A. Vincent, a prominent and faithful member and warden of the Cochrane Street Church congregation, was made by the Pastor, the Rev. C. A. Whitemarsh, M.A. As a tribute of respect the Dead March in Saul was played by Organist Spry, while the congregation remained standing with reverently bowed heads.

What Happened to Marian's Manuscript

Marian, after waiting impatiently for the appearance of the next issue of the Cliff Dweller, was greatly disappointed to see no sign of her story in the magazine. She thought surely that the first of her two accepted stories would be published in this issue. In reply to a letter of inquiry, she was informed that there was no telling just when her tales would fit into the editor's schedule. This letter came in a bulky envelope, enclosing two of her more recent stories, rejected as unavailable. "Let us see more of your work, however," the editor added. He, mindful of his agreement with Jack Meadows, the rich young plutocrat with an eye to Marian's prosperity, knew that he would accept and pay for Marian's next contribution, whether the same happened to be good, bad, or entirely indifferent.

A week later, Marian received a letter from Ransom, the editor, enclosing proof sheets for her O.K. At the top of the first galley, she beheld the title of the first story of hers he had accepted, with her name underneath it. Followed a fiction story which, as she read into it, proved to be everything but a complete stranger to her. She read on through it in a daze of bewilderment. Running through the story, like a subtle, hardly discernible fog, was the general theme around which she had attempted to write. But the story, its words and phrases, its style, its characters, were utter strangers to her, albeit the characters bore the same names she had given them in her manuscript.

Ransom's accompanying letter remarked casually that it had been deemed advisable to make a few editorial changes in the manuscript. He hoped she would see no objections to the alterations. Again, she read the printed story. It picked her up and carried her along on the tide of its swift and convincing flow. Style and power and professional workmanship had been woven in tight strands around the weak and wobbling theme she had attempted to do into a story. The transformation had been wrought by one of the magazine's staff. The whole furnished Marian with a ringing object lesson in story building such as had never come upon her before. She marvelled at the finished product, at the workmanship of this anonymous person who knew how to write.

"This is not my story," she wrote back to the editor, enclosing the proof sheets. "Some magic has befallen it. As it stands, it is a powerful and artistic piece of work. Certainly my name should not appear on it. Nor do I feel that I ought to keep the money you paid me for a manuscript, hardly any of which has found its way into this really excellent tale."

Ransom, the editor, smiled when he read her letter the next day. He wrote back: "You are entirely too modest, Miss Winthrop. The story is yours. We merely weeded out some of the evidences of its amateurishness, and propped it up a bit in places. Your name belongs to it, and the money is yours. Ideas are worth more to an editor than a polished style. It is comparatively a simple matter to hire the latter done. Let us see more of your stories. There is no reason why you should not develop into a very competent writer. I hope you are enjoying your stay among the summer resorters."

The story was eventually printed under Marian's name. She felt guilty about it all. Those of her friends who read it, complimented her lavishly upon it. The deception made her feel humiliated and uneasy, but she could not bring herself to tell the truth about the circumstances surrounding the story. Had she known the whole truth about the story's acceptance, she would have been mortified beyond endurance. Beneficent ignorance of it cast its sheltering folds about her. She did penance for the deception she was practicing by applying herself mercilessly to her writing, flaying herself into the hardest toil she had ever driven herself to.

To-morrow — Mr. Wiley and His Body.

Fogota Back.

The S. S. Fogota, Capt. Dalton, arrived from the Northward at 1:30 a.m. to-day, after one of the stormiest trips for the season. Boisterous weather was experienced going and returning, but the ship managed to make every port of call. On Friday and Saturday last a heavy north-east gale raged making a tremendous sea along the shore, but the little ship weathered it without any damage. She brought a small freight and nine salmon and twelve steerage passengers.
