Unique Background in German Theatres.

German scene designers and directors are in theory steadily toward the "medium," the plain, simple and from which the audience openly player. In practice they tend to try to approach this by using out as much of changing background as possible. They are something in the middle of the way, a flight of steps, a pile of books, and they try to eliminate the stage. Jassner does in Berlin by using his cyclorama a neutral boundary without character in itself.

Walitz, the director of "Messen" uses black curtains, and the St. Krehn, by the same means, to centre attention on small spots placed in the middle of the stage.

The Redoutensaal, in Berlin, the scene is backed up by space. It is a large presence instead of a negative background. Yet it does not obstruct, this splendid room with its mirrors and its mirrors and its mirrors.

These things float in the air of consequence, filling what is a dark, void or a dark, void or a dark, void.

Always the gray, and a living actor, driving his message to the spectators, dominates all—Kenneth Macgowan in Occasions and Decoration.

A Wonderful Tomb.

The Taj Mahal stands on the right bank of the river Jumna. It was built by the beautiful wife of Shahjahan, emperor. She was born in 1592, at the age of nineteen, was married to Prince Khurram, who afterwards became emperor. They lived together for fourteen years. After the death of her husband, she was confined to her room, and she died in 1631. The Taj Mahal was commenced in 1631 and completed in 1648. It took twenty years to build. It is estimated that 20,000 men were employed during the erection of the tomb. It is built out of the most precious white marble to be found in the world, inlaid with precious stones.

The Taj Mahal is a square of 186 feet.

thirty-three and a half feet is cut off each corner, leaving it an octagon shape of four short sides of one hundred and thirty-nine and a half feet and 33 and a half feet respectively. Many inscriptions from the Koran are to be found on different parts of the tomb. The tomb is 243½ feet high and the dome is 50 feet in diameter. It is hollow and full of bats. There are two cenotaphs in the basement, one containing the body of the Emperor, and the other that of his wife. There are four minarets, that stand like sentinels, one of each octagonally projected. These minarets are built entirely of marble and are 141½ feet high. There are a number of other buildings on the grounds. The emperor, it is said, intended to build a tomb for himself on the other side of the river and have them connected with a marble bridge, but for some reason his plans were never put into execution.

Noted Dwarfs.

The attention which was recently drawn to the existence in one of the some counties of a Mr. Lambert who was only 34 inches in height recalls to the memory several other persons of very few inches.

Some of these, such as Tom Thumb and the Midgets, are well known, but there are others practically unknown to the majority of people. A Chinese who was only 35 inches in height was exhibited in London in 1880. Bebe, the favorite of Stanislaus, King of Poland in 1764, was but 30 inches in height at the time of his death at the age of twenty-three.

Even the Court of England once possessed a dwarf, named Copperin, the pet of that Princess of Wales, who became the mother of King George III., and he was under 30 inches in height. Then the famous Faery Queen who was exhibited in the old and now demolished Egyptian Hall in Regent Street in 1880, was only 16 inches tall and when seated under a man's silk hat was unable to see over the top.

Queen Henrietta Maria, also had a dwarf, a native of Oakham, in Rutlandshire. Geoffrey Hudson, only 17 inches high, who was quite unable to reach, some of the taller flowers in the Queen's gardens at Rushbrooke Hall.

Twenty-four inches was the height of John Jarvis, page to Queen Mary, daughter of Henry VIII., while the Emperor Augustus had a dwarf, named Lucius, who weighed only 17 pounds, and was not quite two feet in height.

The smallest example of all, however, comes from the city of Rastatt, near the German town of Karlsruhe in the Duchy of Baden, where a family, consisting of father, mother, and daughter, aged 17 years, totalled between them only 40 inches.

This was the Straese Davit family, and their bodies were embalmed in the chemical laboratory of the town.

Mussolini Had Exciting Youth.

Benito Mussolini, whose spectacular rise to the Italian Premiership has excited world wide interest, spent an exciting few years in Switzerland during his youth. His entrance into Switzerland was dramatic. He was pursued over the frontier at Chiasso by Italian gendarmes, who had a warrant for his arrest, but won his race for freedom by a scant hundred yards, and the Swiss customs officers refused to surrender him. Mussolini at that time was about 20 years of age. Peniless he crossed the St. Gothard Pass on foot, and upon his arrival in Lugano was arrested as a vagabond without visible means of support. Political friends, however, came to his aid. Later he entered the University of Lausanne, but, as he was a Revolutionary Socialist, and wrote many fiery articles for the Swiss and Italian Socialist press, he was finally expelled from Switzerland after a warning which he refused to heed. Mussolini then went to Trent, in old Austrian Tyrol, whence he was also expelled in 1911. Upon the declaration of a general amnesty he left Trent for Milan, where he founded the newspaper Popolo Italia. He aroused the hatred of the Socialist people in the conduct of his paper, however, by his campaign in favor of Italy's entrance into the war on the side of the Entente, and later fought with the Italian forces at Monte Nero and at Carso, where he was severely wounded. Mussolini left a number of small debts in Geneva and at Lausanne, which, upon his departure, he laughingly promised to pay when he should become a member of the Italian Government.

NOT MUCH AT HOME.

A little girl, whose father was a commercial traveller, sat in the porch holding a kitten in her arms, and doing her best to entertain it with a lively string of chatter. "Gittie," she finished thoughtfully, "I know all your little brothers and sisters, an' I know your mamma; but I ain't never seen your papa; I s'pect he must be a traveller."

Relieves Dyspepsia

M.D. advises: "Persons who suffer from severe indigestion and constipation should take after each meal and at bedtime, fifteen to thirty drops of the Extract of Roots known as the Drug Trade as 'Mother Selig's Curative Syrup.' Get the Genuine. 50c. and $1.00 bottles."

TOO MUCH RISK.

Softly the hospital nurse smoothed the sufferer's pillow. He had only been admitted that morning, and now he looked up at her pleadingly. "Ah! phwat did ye say the doctor's name was, nurse, dear?" he asked. "Dr. Kilpatrick," was the reply. "He's the senior House Surgeon." The sufferer winced and pulled a wry face. "That settles it," he muttered grimly. "That doctor won't get no chance to operate on me."

"Why not?" asked the nurse, in surprise. "He's a very clever man."

"That's as may be," the patient said again, his voice cold and strong. "But me name happens to be Patrick."
