It does not take many days sometimes for whole months to roll by, especially to hearts that are full of hope and love. Many days, indeed! Many hours rather. But when hope and love are the only treasures that either hearts or hands possess, the hours change even into minutes. For without the aid either of hope or of love the passage from bad to worse, in a worldly sense, is always traveled at a gallop. "I'll tell you who Time gallops withal"—it is not only with the thief to the gallows, but with a man who every day finds himself poorer than the day before.

by any means necessarily synonymous with power. It is not less true because it is unsatisfactory, that a gentleman almost always drops into the background when he is matched with professional runners. He is above jostling and cross-running, and does not take his raining kindly, they are not and they do. Your great artist has almost invariably been one who has risen from the ranks, not one who has been degraded to them. But though this is so, and though poverty very soon came to knock at the door in Newman street, love did not make so much as even a love did not make so much as even a flutter of his wings towards the window. Perhaps it was only because he was afraid of soiling them in the dingy and uncomfortable atmosphere outside; but whatever the reason may have been, he obstinately remained. In deed, Felicia seemed to develop in the cold in a way for which her sister flowers, for the most part, require hothouse culture. It is even possible that she may have done her husband some little harm, speaking after the manner of the world, by rendering his own anxieties, his own outward troubles, less hard to bear, even as she had in the first instance rendered his general work against the services.

There is no limit to the romance of poverty. Roses are never weary of growing among the brambles, and not the less so because they are so apt to be hidden by the brambles among which hey grow. But this is too large a topi for present consideration; and to those who, like those with whom we are at present concerned, are themselves strug-gling through the bramble-bush, the roses are apt to be far less conspicuous

The outward history of Arthur Cranstoun was something like this: He went and shut himself up in his studio and set to work upon a picture, living at first upon a few pounds that he had about him, and which he fancied that he mas thereby investing in a specular. he was thereby investing in a speculation upon the security of his genius and industry that was to bring him in interest at the rate of at least ten thousand per cent—a dream which Felicia shared to his heart's content. But even these few pounds did not last as long as their chould have done in receive here. they should have done in reasonably economical hands. Not only were small pleasures often preferred to absolute necessities, but not a few of the few sovereigns somehow contrived to get rid of themselves in aiding old Mrs. Levi to fight the battle of life a little longer; indeed, some of them even secretly found their way into the hands of her son. Arthur had told Felicia their miserally are the son. son, Arthur had told Felicia their miserble story, and the latter could not rest until she had paid a visit to the mother, and had sent anonymously to the son more than the donors could spare. There was not, in short, a single prudential maxim that was not set at deflance by this extravagant pair, from "A bird in the hand." to "Charity begins at home." They insisted on preferring the twe birds in the bush, and on being kind to others to such an extent as to be unkind to themselves. Meanwhile it need not be said that, in proportion to the growth of the great picture that was to set everything to rights, the sovereigns got fewer and fewer, until at last, had Felicia been the lady of some Ellot or Armstrong of the good old border days, she would have served him up a pair of spurs for his breakfast as a delicate way of putting it that, if he wanted his breakfast at all, he must either use or eat them. all he must either use or eat them.
On the first of these occasions, however, they both breakfasted and dined ever, they both breakfasted and dined upon a ring of little value belonging to Arthur; on the second, on a pair of car-rings belonging to Felicia. But as it must yet be a long time before the pic-ture could be exhibited, and as the united stock of pawnable articles was small, something decisive must be done

That is to say, there was every week a balance of about fl to the wrong side of the account, which had to be made good in order that existence might be supported in the poorest way. If the family should in due time happen to increase in number, it would be a bad erease in number, it would be a bad lookout indeed, unless it is true that God never sends mouths without sending food to fill them-a doctrine which is by no means recognized by political econo-

Does the reader know what the above balance-sheet means? It is to be hoped not. For it means dinners of dry bread and water, with the occasional addition of meat as a medicine rather than as food: it means the existence of two people in two very small, very barely furnished rooms that must answer all the purposes of bedroom, kitchen, studio, dining-room, reception-room and work-room, with a prospect of having to serve for a numery as well; in which the misfor a nursery as well; in which the mis-tress has to be at once both cook, house-maid, dressmaker and tailor: it means toil without recreation: it means in whose company no one would wish to be seen even by a stranger: it means loss of all acquaintances: it means the exof all acquaintances: it means the expenditure of all one's energies upon the great question of how to obtain enough food to escape starvation: it means darkness, hunger and cold. A hundred and eighty pounds a year is a splendid income for a skilled mechanic; it is a sufficient income for many a lawyer, surgeon, or clergyman: but for people like Arthur and Felicia it means the very brink of absolute pauperism. And then, worst of all, there was a feeling, shared, though not expressed by both, that if it had not been for me, he or she would be in comfort. And yet I do not think that either of these two would have given up their poverty for an em-have given up their poverty for an empire if the empire had to be ruled alone. Their labor of body and mind seemed to be endless, unprofitable, vain; and yet they also, after their fashion, had a good reward for it after all.

BASEBALL THE BIG LEAGUE ROW.

THE BIG LEAGUE ROW.

New York, Dec. 17.—Andrew Freedman, through counsel, late yesterday afternoon, obtained an injunction in the supreme court to restrain A. G. Spalding from assuming the presidency of the National Baseball League, and restraining him from interfering in the business of the league in any way whatever. The order further restrains Nicholas E. Young from delivering to Spalding any of the books, records or papers of the league. The defendants are ordered to show cause before Judge Scott on Dec. 19 inst. why the injunction should not be made permanent. In this action Mr. Freedman represented the New York, Boston, Cincinnati and St. Louis baseball clubs. Mr. Spalding stands representative of the other four clubs in the National League—Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburg. By the injunction proceedings Mr. Freedman hopes to have the election of Mr. Spalding as president of the league declared illegal. The legal papers in Mr. Freedman's suit were served on Mr. Spalding late in the afternoon, as he was leaving the meeting room at the hotel, where he had been acting as president of the league for the first time, following a declaration in the afternoon that he was president of the league, and declaring Mr. Freedman out of the league, and declaring Mr. Freedman out of the league, and acting Mr. Freedman out of the league, and acting Mr. Freedman out of the league and acting Mr. Freedman out of the league, and acting Mr. Freedman out of the league, and acting Mr. Freedman out of the league on a expulsion of Mr. Freedman, but Mr. Spalding himof the league. Many followers of baseball last night argued that this declaration was tantamount to an expulsion of Mr. Freedman, but Mr. Spalding himself said Mr. Freedman had not been expelled from the league.

Mr. Spalding gave out in the evening copies of telegrams he had received from P. T. Powers, of the Eastern League, and Ban Johnson, of the American League, in which these two men promised their co-operation to Mr. Spalding. It was the opinion of many last night that the only means by which Mr. Preedman could be put out of the league was through the disruption of that body. It was suggested that an amalgamation of the American and National Leagues may take place, and a twelve club circuit adopted. Mr. Spalding read a letter that he had sent to Mr. Freedman. In this letter Spalding notified Freedman of the hour of yesterday's meeting, and asked him to be present. The closing paragraph was: "You may consider this a public challenge to meet me in a public debate on this baseball question. Freedman or Spalding must get out of the game for good. It's up to you, Mr. Freedman or Spalding must get out of the game for good. It's up to you, Mr. Freedman. Play ball." Then Spalding read a letter from a legal firm of this city, in which the lawyers gave it as their opinion that the proceedings at the meeting held on Saturday afternoon were regular and legal. Mr. Spalding then took up his firm's attitude in furnishing baseballs to the league, and it was decided the contract should be renewed.
P. T. Powers made a short speech, in which he said that the minor league demanded equal representation in all matters.

"What I want to see in baseball," said

Mr. Spalding "is union and baseball," said

"What I want to see in baseball," said Mr. Spalding, "is union and harmony and a central governing body." Powers said he would come in on the basis of equal representation. Mr. Spalding agreed to this, but said the players also ought to have a say. Mr. Spalding suggested a conference between himself, Powers, John M. Ward and Ban Johnson. Powers and Ward said they would attend. The John M. Ward and Ban Johnson. Powers and Ward said they would attend. The meeting adjourned at II o'clock.

Soden, of Boston, said last night: "We took the matter into court so that we could have an opinion as to the validity of Spalding's election. The case is entirely a friendly one."

Spalding yesterday exhibited letters indorsing his course, written by J. H. Billings and John P. Morrill, of Boston, and E. A. Power, president of the Ameriand E. A. Power, president of the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago. BASKET BALL. Y. M. C. A. AT TORONTO.

RAILWAY RATES TO CURLERS. Toronto, Dec. 17.—Secretary James A. McFadden, of the Ontario Curling Association, on Saturday received a communication from former Secretary J. S. Russell, who interviewed the Canadian railway passenger committee regarding the restoration of the old club rates to curlers. Formerly curlers were given club rates of a fare and a third for eight players (two rinks), but the railways in-creased the number of players necessary to ten. The communication stated that the railway companies deemed it unwise Woman Starts a Run on a New York Bank-Beggar Withdraws a Deposit of $360.60.

New York, Dec. 17 .- Because a nervous woman could not draw $2 from an Eastside bank the other morning before banking hours she concluded that here was something wrong with the bank and rushed through the Ghetto crying out that the bank had failed. Immediately a constantly increasing number of depositors assailed the paying teller. At night the region of the bank was thronged with insane depos-itors, many of whom camped in line all night in order to be promptly on hand the next morning. At daybreak 150 men and women were on the spot and the crowd rapidly increased until at 10 o'clock there was a surging mass of crazy humanity around the bank. The situation became so threatening that a large force of police were called to the scene and finally the mob was placed under control. The bank is a solvent institution patronized largely by Poles, Slavs and Huns, and its list of depositors extends all over the country. All of the de-posits withdrawn were very small, averaging well below $100 and ranging down to $2. In all only $10,000 was withdrawn.

This column recently recorded the arrest of a female mendicant who accosted Miss Carey as she was leaving the house of J. P. Morgan in Madison avenue and further that the beggar was fined $10. An interesting com-mentary on the incident is furnished in the fact that the woman was one of drew their money from the bank in question. An observer who discovered the woman's identity noted with interest that she withdrew $360 60. She then made a scene by demanding her interest from July 1, which, of course, was refused, and the police escorted her to Albert's Mother Metes Out Even-Handed Justice While Judge and Spectators Grin.

[Buffalo Evening News, Dec. 16.] Punishment well calculated to fit the crime was meted out promptly in the case of Albert Schunck, 15 years old, in Morning Justice Rochford's court to-Schunck was arraigned with Michael Cohen and William Smith, 16 and 15 years old, respectively, for hanging around the entrance of the Lyceum Theater. The other boys were arrested before and were let off with a reprimand, but Schunck, it appeared had been arrested once before for fighting. His mother appeared and begged for the privilege of punishing him.

"Will you give him a good spanking?" inquired Just ce Rochford.

"Sure!" replied the mother with eagerness. "And will you use a barrel stave?" pursued the justice.
"Ja," replied Mrs. Schunck, "und vil gif him some spanks now alretty.'
The prisoner was turned over to her and she made good. She laid Albert across her knee and brought down a trained palm where it would do the most good. Albert was surly when she began, but after a dozen blistering whacks were laid on he began to

At the conclusion of the perfomance Mrs. Schunck led her weeping prisoner out by the ear while the spectators and policemen applauded.

Then Justice Rochford faced the other prisoners who had forgotten their own troubles and were grinning at the punishment of Schunck. "I don't know where your license to grin comes in,' he said. "If you had got more of that same medicine at he age you probably wouldn't be here And the men and women bowed their heads to signify their appreciation of the fact that a Daniel had come Strange Circumstances About the Death of Wm. G. Urlin.

He Was Found in a Chicken-Coop With Two Bullet Wounds Behind One of His Ears.

Dutton, Ont., Dec. 17.—At about 8 o'clock Sunday morning, William G. Urlin was found dead in the hencoop, in the rear of his residence. The circumstances were such that Dr. Ling, coroner, deemed it necessary to hold an inquest, which opened this after-noon. Deceased, who once resided in London, was 48 years old, and was at one time a member of the firm of Urlin Bros., who carried on a general store in this place. He was out of employment for a few weeks, and is said to have become despondent. Nothing was seen of him by his own family after Saturday night until his body was found in the hencoop. A peculiar circumstance is that two bullet wounds were found back of the right ear. Some physicians say that a man could not so shoot himself Other remarkable facts are that the skin was not burned, indicating that the shots were not fired at close range, and no shots were heard, although the family were up all night. A revolver belonging to Albert Hertel, his brother-in-law, was found close by where the body was lying when found. Three chambers were empty and two were loaded when the revolver was found. The deceased eaves a wife and four children. A.

D. Urlin, who keeps the Queen's Hotel, is a brother.

The inquest was opened this afternoon before Coroner Ling, of Dutton, County Crown Attorney Donahue was present to represent the crown; C. St. Clair Leitch, of Dutton, the family and W. L. McLaws, of St. Thomas, private parties.

After hearing the evidence of Albert Hertel, who found the body, the inquest was adjourned till next Monday. Before the funeral, however, a post-mortem will be held. There was an insurance of $2,000 on the life of deceased. The deed had been caused by a revolver, placed back of the ear. found the face was enveloped in a frozen mas of blood. The deceased did not return for his tea Saturday evening, and inquiries were set on foot. When he did not return home Saturday evening, still graver doubts were entertained. The finding of the body was a shock. Mrs. B. F. Honsigner, St. Thomas, and Mrs. R. Chambers, Columbus, Ohio, are sisters, and G. C. Urlin, Columbus, a brother of deceased. Thos. Arkell, of St. Thomas, is a brother-in-law.
