A TELEPHONE WAR,

Two and Perhaps Three Companies to Operate in Toronto-Cheaper Instruto take orders in this city, the intention being to have a rival system to the Bell cempany. It is also understood that a third company will soon begin operations, it being the intention of both companies, like that of the Bell, to extend their wires all over the province. The present rate charged by the Bell company is a yearly second company proposes to charge $30 a ear, or to sell the instrument and put it year, or to sell the instrument and put it in for $40, and then charge an annual rental of $20 for the use of wire and the exchange. It becomes at once a question for citizens whether it is wise to have for citizens whether it is wise to have more than one telephone system. The number of poles and wires in the city will be greatly increased. A business that desires the fullest telephone communication will have to become a subscriber to all the companies, and thereby have the cost doubled or trebled. Besides this the cost of management of three rival companies will be much greater than what one consolidated would be. It is said that there is no reason why telephones should not be put into houses and stores for $25 a year and one exchange manage the whole business. Of course the question is one of competition, and the least possible prices for the services, and if these cannot be secured by one company then all the prices for the services, and it these cannot be secured by one company then all the companies should be allowed to compete, but there should be legislation to that end, that wherever there are rival companies they should be compelled to exchange messages from one system to the other without additional compensation.

The second company claim that they have taken a number of the subscribers of the Bell company.

What the pubrecent English-Canadian. What the publishers promised with the initial number has been carried out to the end of the work. The engravings have been varied and numerous, and bear witness of good workmanship and a liberal expenditure of money. The best of paper has been used throughout, and the greatest care has apparently been taken with the press work and other mechanical processes necessary to the production of the work. The publishers are to be congratulated on having to the production of the work. The publishers are to be congratulated on having so successfully carried out the details of what was a big undertaking, and in having so faithfully kept their promise with the public, who, at first, had no guarantee other than that promise that the last part would be worthy of the first. The various parts form a consistent whole, which needs only a suitable binding to make it occupy a suitable binding to make it occupy an enviable position in the eyes of the other tomes of your library. The climax was reached Friday night when a farmer named Wm. Convey was robbed of $200 and his horse and wagon. Warrants were again issued for the arrest of Cooney and his gang and placed in the hands of County Constable Waites. He secured the assistance of another constable and Sunday afternoon they went to a barn in rear of the old Queen's hotel, Bellwoods avenue, where they found Cooney, whom they at once took to jail. At 9 30 Sunday night they again visited the barn and captured Joseph Rouke, another member of the gang. Before morning they had also arrested Thomas McDermott and William Stead of the same gang.
