know that I could kill you on the spot if I liked?' 'Well,' replied General Gordon, 'I am ready!' 'What I ready to be killed?' Certainly, I am always ready to die, and so far from fearing your putting me to death, you would confer a favor on me by doing so, for you would be doing for me that, which scrub have disappeared and, this prince of the state of that spot the forest and the scrub have disappeared and, this place of the state of that spot the forest and the scrub have disappeared and, this place of the state of that spot the forest and the scrub have disappeared and, this place of the state of that spot the forest and the scrub have disappeared and this place.

had a will as imperious as Napoleon's; he had a nature as inflexible as Crom well's; he had Clive's genius for war and fertility of resource; he had Jan Lawrence's capacity for governing semi-civilized races; he had Francis Xavier's overmastering love of humanity. But with these traits were combined a chivalrous devotion to the races for whom he labored, a contempt for the statesmanship of Europe, an unquestioning reliance upon the law of his own conscience, and an intense religion that reflected at once the mysticism of the middle ages, the austere virtues of Puritanism and the fatalism of the east. A man of commanding genius in achieving great results by means of insignificant instrumentalis.

The Gordons have been soldiers moved from them by unique character istics. The Gordons have been soldiers from Preston Pans, and on his mother's side he had inherited the restless spirit of the Enderbys—a family of famous nvaigators and explorers; but amazing as were his campaigns against the Taip.

No listery of inventions; none of the as were his campaigns against the Taipings, startling as were the vicissitudes of his fortune in the Soudan; he hated warfare and had a life-long yearning for seclusion and contemplative study. He was a soldier of fortune, laboring at the ends of the earth without a trace of mercenary taint, a chivalrous knight figting neither his country's battles nor the campaign of oivilization, but enlisted in crusades on behalf of humanity. There is no the factor of inventions; none of the encyclopedias in our great libraries; no historian of human progress, so far as we know gives any information on the subject, unless we accept the Roman author, Pliny, who mistakenly attributes the invention to the Gauls who inhabited the banks of the Po. We say mistakenly, since there is the best of good reasons for believing that the bar rel was long before the Gauls took possession of their Italian home, perhaps long before the Gauls existed as a peo against a horde of barbarians. He has raised armies and paid and led them without money. He has conducted a marvellous campaign by promising liberty to several thousands of blacks, and by mounting rusty artiflery on a fleet of leaking hulks. He has stood on the broken rampart, a solitary English sentry refusing to desert those who had trusted in him, and awaiting an army of rescuers which never came. And there he will remain in the memory of the nation—a sublime figure, never to be forgotten; his heroism, fortitude, the nation—a sublime figure, never to be forgotten; his heroism, fortitude, chivalrous loyalty and christian faith understood at last.
