FRIDAY February 21st., 1908

To the Fruit Growers of the Annapolis Valley the present season has good market for the bountiful crop. On the contrary, since that time the of the fruit has proved to be exceptionally poor. The apples are spotted and mouldy-a lamentable state of affairs-due, doubtless, to the continued wet of the fall and the mild moist weather of the winter. While performing my duties as Inspector among the packing houses and at the docks in Halifax, I have seen
