market, and no more are expected after to-day's steamer, Shipments of Oregon fruit still continue to come in. There being a considerable surplus in Oregon, dealers are shipping here, and as a consequence prices are low. The crop in British Columbia is very small in comparison with other years, and farme: s are reported as holding for good prices. Jobbers say that Oregon friut is put in better packages and packed more carefully, and besides being lower in price make it an inducement for the jobber to handle large quantities of it. A large consignment of limish Columbia fruit, preserved whole in glass jars, was shipped to England last week by Messrs, Okell & Morris, from the Victoria preserving factory.
