

These are our views on the general principle of achieving a settlement. It seems to us that the resolution proposed by the United States is consistent with these principles. It urges us to continue looking for a means of achieving the objective of unification; it insists on those fundamental principles which, as I have stated, must be the basis of a settlement; and it does not preclude negotiations for a settlement which should satisfy the legitimate demands of all concerned.

---

S/C