

and the population of the country is 3.5 million. Lithuania has a long history of independence, having been an independent state from 1918 to 1940.

The capital of Lithuania is Vilnius, which is located in the center of the country. The country is divided into 10 regions, each with its own government.

Lithuania is a member of the European Union and the Eurozone, and it is part of the Schengen Area.

The official language of Lithuania is Lithuanian, which is spoken by about 85% of the population. The country's currency is the Litas, and its economy is based on agriculture, manufacturing, and services.

The country's terrain is mostly flat, with some hills and mountains in the west and north. Lithuania has a temperate climate, with four distinct seasons. The country's natural resources include timber, coal, and oil.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil.

The country's most important imports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The capital of Lithuania is Vilnius, which is located in the center of the country. The country is divided into 10 regions, each with its own government.

The official language of Lithuania is Lithuanian, which is spoken by about 85% of the population. The country's currency is the Litas, and its economy is based on agriculture, manufacturing, and services.

The country's terrain is mostly flat, with some hills and mountains in the west and north. Lithuania has a temperate climate, with four distinct seasons. The country's natural resources include timber, coal, and oil.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil.

The country's most important imports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.

The country's most important exports are timber, coal, and oil. Lithuania's economy is heavily dependent on agriculture, with about 70% of the population working in the sector. The country's main export markets are Germany, Poland, and Russia. Lithuania's main import partners are Germany, Poland, and Russia.