

has been participating in the discussion as chief founder of the Kellogg Pact and not yet as a member of the League. The Kellogg Pact and the League Covenant were equally involved and it was neither possible nor desirable to ignore the chief sponsor of the former. If we had any doubts on this point, the fact that Britain and France and Germany and Italy and Czechoslovakia and Spain and Poland and Ireland and five other members of the Council are for once in absolute agreement, should dispel such doubts. The Council up to date has shown great moral courage; for several painful weeks it has done its duty unflinchingly; it has stood by the solemn Covenant we all signed in 1919. Let us do as well! Let us stand by the Covenant and the Council!
