Edward Carter, Sixteen Years Old, Met in the Humber Because Canoeist He sitated and Could Not Give Assistance Clark, Aged Twelve, Sank While Playing in Water at Rosebank-Woman and Child Injured by Taxicab-Twelve Drownings in Three Weeks.

Lack of life-saving appliances and the refusal of at least two boaters assist in the rescue of drowning persons, were responsible for the loss of two more lives in the waters surrounding Toronto. The toll of deaths from drowning during the past three weeks is now twelve—six since Saturday. Yesterday one boy sank in the Humber River, when a man in a canoe could have saved him. Another youngster lost his life in the Rouge River at Rosebank.

In the case of the boy at the Humber the circumstances were identical with those under which Edward Vice, aged 25, who lived at the Hayden House, 1832 St. Clair avenue, was drowned at the fourth bend of the river on Monday night. Vice screamed for hely. A man in a rowboat close to him, answered: "I can't help you. I've got a woman in this boat with then rowed down the river to a pavilion and told them a youth was drowning. When relief was sent the youth had disapepared.

Carter and William Thomas, who Carter, and William Thomas, who lives with the toy's parents at 349 Royce avenue, set out early yesterday morning to get re'ief from the intense heat. The two decided to go for a swim. They came down the eastern bank of the river from West Toronto and undressed about one hundred yards south of the river forks (the fifth bend).

After swimming for a few minutes Carter started for the opposite shore. He got out in the middle and suddenly thru up his hands and shouted. Thomas immediately suspected that his companien hau-taken a cramp. He plunged into the water and street. plunged into the water and swam out to him. Thomas grabbed the youth around the waist and held him.

But Carter was thoroly frightened. He struggled fiercely. Both swimmers then sank. The older man pulled Carter to the surface and called for help. Then they went under again. A man in a canoe came paddling up the stream. He became excited and on account of the stiff current was unable to get close enough to either man, and did not seem to understand that he should throw a paddle out or someshould throw a paddle out or something of the kind. Thomas shouted to him to jump into the water and they could both get the boy out, thinking that they might all cling to the cance. The canoeist then hesitated, and just then the current whipped his canoe down stream. By the time he fought back again the two in the water had disappeared. Thomas alone came to the surface.

Diving was commenced at once swimmers in the vicinity and the body recovered about 9.35. Artificial res-piration was commenced and Dr. God-frey summoned. After working on the body for a little over an hour the doctor pronounced the boy dead. The pulmotor was not sent for.

The body was removed to Norman Craig's undertaking parlors. An inquest opened last night and Flames Have Reached the Outskirts of Many Towns and the Wind Is Gaining In Velocity----Fugitives Have Started South, While Pioneers Are Taking Refuge at Lakes and Rivers----Rain Fell at Cochrane Just As Everyone Had Given Up All Hope.

COBALT, July 1.—(Special.)—The whole of Timiskaming is ablaze with forest fires, and every bush town north of New Liskeard is in danger. All along the T. & N. O. from Uno Park to Cochrane, along the Transcontinental east to Bell River and West to Hearst, the bush is a roaring fiery furnace, and fanned by a high wind may engulf the towns at any time. The inhabitants gave up all idea of the celebration of confederation and are fighting for their property and even their lives. For two days tired men have carried water and run to and fro in smoke and sweltering heat. Even around the settled towns of Cobalt, New Liskeard and Haileybury wood smoke makes the air acrid and Dominion Day crowds are covered with ashes. Pillars of smoke lower in air along the horizon and as the breeze strengthens, great waves of flame redden the heavens.

If there is no rain within the next day or so, God help any settler or prospector, farmer or townsman within reach of flying embers from the walls of flame.

Valuables Are Sent Out.

On the T. & N. O. trains going south, express vans are full of trunks containing valuables sent out by men and women who are staying behind to fight the flames. Others are hastily burying their treasures. There is no knowledge of loss of life, and probably may not be, for pioneers, wiser than two years ago, are fleeing before the holocaust to lakes and rivers and other places of safety.

But the loss will be enormous. All lines are down north of Earlton, where it is reported fourteen families are homeless, and there is no communication except by the T. & N. O. trains as they come thru. Fugitives are beginning to come south bereft of all they possess and disconsolate, tired with long hours of fighting the flames.

Blackened with smoke and flames at Thornloe, a small station near Earlton two heroic women were directing a small hose against the encroaching blaze, their men folk all away defending other vulnerable points. Rumors thicken every Rain Fell at Cochrane.

The fight is resumed again today with better heart, tho the wind is even higher. From Porcupine it is learned that fires that have been surrounding the towns, have descended to the outskirts and that all festivity has been dropped in order to join the bucket brigade. Shacks have been destroyed on Dome road and it is reported that Porcupine or Golden City had or has been lost; but this is not confirmed. From Cobalt north the light of the sun is obscured and the heavens are darkened. At Jacksonboro, west of Cochrane, 100,000 sawlogs, representing a year's work, have been destroyed.

Forest fires are going all around Hearst and grave fears are expressed for its safety. It is impossible to communicate with settlers, but it is certain that hundreds have been made home-

Like an Intervention of Fate.

COCHRANE, July 1.—(Special.)—Three towns of the far north are standing today thru what seemed like nothing but the intervention of fate. On Monday afternoon at 2.30, South Porcupine and Cochrane were covered by a pall of smoke and the fires were creeping rapidly towards the frame buildings which have gone up since the memorable fire of 1911, and remade the towns which then were reduced to the ground. At Porcupine the wind dropped and gave the men who were fighting the approaching flames a chance to stave them off and partially master them. At Cochrane hope of saving the town had been almost abandoned when what seemed like a providential torrent of rain fell for a period of ten minutes and gave the citizens, who were struggling in a sweltering sun and almost blinded by the clouds of smoke, a respite and chance to start in with renewed vigor. Starting west of the Town of Cochrane, the fire crept in toward the old T. & N. O. station, and for hours it and the big lumber mill of McKnight & McKinnon were in danger of taking fire at any moment. A gale of about 30 miles an hour was blowing, and the sparks were beginning to fly towards the thousands of feet of lumber piled in McKinnon's yard, when the wind veered and began to blow north. With it the fire swung around and burned west of the town. It was raging for over half a mile when the downpour commenced. It was shortly after noon that the first alarm was turned in, and within an hour the fire was almost be yord control.

First House to Go.

The wind was sweeping it closer and closer to the town, and the first building to go was a $2000 farm house on a clearing just outside the town, owned by John Christanson, a pieneer settler. In the face of the blinding heat, men tried in vain to stay the progress of the flames. The wind was beginning to shower the sparks in the extreme western section of the town, which is almost entirely frame, and the people there gave up hope and began to pack their belongings. Some started out to save the household effects, and others stood on the roofs and kept streams and buckets of water poured on the sparks. General appeals were made for help and one of the first companies to respond was the Grand Trunk Pacific, which placed a couple of engines at the disposal of the people to haul water as near as possible to the fire. Acting Mayor Ben Rothschild, Chief Fire Ranger Stewart and Archie McDonald, customs inspector, and other pioneers of the thriving little northern town were in the
