Two forces determined Comiskey to spend the money. They are his maxims: "There's no money in a loser," and "If one team wins all the pennants, the others might as well close shop."

Comiskey has won pennants, and his success is evidence that if he sets about it he can come close to repeating.

This year the Sox finished fourth. Comiskey seemed indifferent. His attitude caused comment. Then Commy came out of it on the run and sent out Ted Sullivan scouting. Sullivan was on the jump until

South side fans do not pin their hope of a winner on this injection of new blood so much as upon Comiskey's promise that next year's pennant will float over the home of the White Sox.

"He never promised anything he didn't deliver," they declare. And Commy has spoken.

Comiskey Is Spending $100,000

"Spending $100,000 For Players to Win Another Pennant" might be the title of a book written about Charlie Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox.

The "Old Roman" has spent $10,000 for mew men this year to get a pennant-winner for 1910. On top of this he is building one of the finest parks in the country.

Two forces determined Comiskey to spend the money. They are his maxims:
