3-ALARM FIRE DESTROYED WORKS PLANT

minutes after the sounding of the first alarm. It was said that there were about 16 employees at work in the building at the time of the fire, the origin of which was not definitely known. Two of the employees said that while at work the flames seemed suddenly to shoot out and the building was on fire before they knew it.

Several of the wires of the Civil Hydro Commission were burned off the poles and fell to the ground, some of the firemen having narrow escapes from being electrocuted. The power was shut off and Barry Wilson, the engineer of the commission, had men at work disconnecting the taps to Elm street, on completion of which service to the North End was resumed. A cable of the New Brunswick Telephone Company leading out Elm street and serving about 25 customers was destroyed.

TRAFFIC HELD UP

Traffic in Main street between Portland and Harrison, was suspended about an hour, street cars from the city going as far as Portland street and returning.

It was said that a spectator had one of his hands burned by a falling wire and this caused one of the members of the Salvage Corps to remark that spectators did not sufficiently obey the orders of these fire policemen who have power to make arrests if necessary.

During the excitement caused by the fire and the heavy congestion of traffic a boy named Harold McLeod was knocked down in Brooks street and was taken to the General Public Hospital where he received treatment and later went to his home.

TO REBUILD PLANT

The building occupied by the dye works was built about 35 years ago and was of two-story wooden construction with concrete basement. It was owned by the Burton estate. George Burton, manager of the business, said that he estimated the loss at more than $100,000, with $2,000 insurance. He said it was the intention to immediately rebuild with a modern brick and concrete structure.

During the course of the fire the awning of the store of H. Myles Saunders in Main street became ignited from a spark, but the fire was quickly beaten out with a broom.

A large number of calls were sent into the N. B. Telephone Co. from offices, with the result that every available member of the staff was pressed into duty to answer them. So great was the demand for information, however, double the staff would have hardly filled the bill, telephone company officials report.

Trouble Over Auto Engine While Berlenbach-Stribling Story Is Told

The broadcasting of the Berlenbach-Stribling fight by Charles I. Gorman from The Times-Star and Telegraph-Journal building last night must have been very realistic as it caused some of the auditors to become imbued with pugilistic tendencies. Roy Ross, recently William Logan keeping the engine of his automobile running and that he could not hear what was being maged, an altercation ensued and as a result Ross was arrested by Detective Kilpatrick and Acting Detective Ganton on a charge of committing a breach of the peace in view of the police. In court this morning he denied that he had hit Logan, but said that the latter had run into his open hand. As the matter was not of a serious nature he was fined $5 instead of the usual $20.
