

CAPT. J. J. DUNLOP FOUND DROWNED

Well Known Dredge Officer Loses Life at Cape Tormentine.

Captain John J. Dunlop, well known dredge captain, was drowned Saturday evening last at Cape Tormentine, N. B., where he had charge of dredging operations there and at Borden, P. E. I., for the Federal Department of Railways and Canals. As near as can be ascertained, Captain Dunlop was returning from the town to the dredge Kennebec, which is being laid up there for the winter. He was carrying a lantern. The lantern was found on a narrow board walk leading to the dredge about 6.30 o'clock Sunday morning by the dredge watchman, who found Captain Dunlop's cabin unoccupied when he went to call him Sunday morning.

The watchman noticed a cap floating in the water near the dock and, on recovering it, recognized it as Captain Dunlop's. He immediately notified others of his discovery and search was begun. Ten men grappled all day Sunday without success but about 11.30 o'clock Monday morning the body was recovered. It will be forwarded to St. John for interment.

Besides his widow, formerly Miss Clara Durham, of Welland, Ont., the late Captain Dunlop is survived by four sons, John J., Jr., Teskey E., Welland and Hugh, and one daughter, Barbara. One brother, Merritt Dunlop, of Port Colborne, Ont., also survives.

Born at Port Colborne, Ont., in 1863, Captain Dunlop was probably one of the best known dredge captains on the Atlantic coast. During his career he had charge of many important dredging operations in New York, Boston, Halifax and Yarmouth. At Montreal, several years ago he had charge of the dredging of the channel and berth for Montreal's floating dry dock at the Federal Department of Marine and Fisheries with two of the largest dipper dredges in the world.

Captain Dunlop was well known in St. John, as several years ago he carried through to a successful conclusion the work of dredging for the present city docks at Sand Point, West St. John, and also part of the channel leading into Courtenay Bay. He also has been in command of dredging work at Dalhousie, N. B., and at various ports on the Great Lakes.

Two years ago he accepted a position in charge of the dredging work in connection with the operation of P. E. Island's car ferry in the Northumberland Straits. His work at this point elicited strong commendation from his superiors and he had been granted several weeks' holidays and was preparing to spend Christmas and part of the winter with his family in St. John. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

FORTY ENJOYED HIS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Burgess, Main street, Fairville, were hosts for their 11-year-old son, Wesley Burgess, on Friday evening of last week. There were more than 40 guests present and everyone enjoyed thoroughly the pleasant evening. A birthday cake was represented in rich icing and red, white and blue candles. Hidden in the depths of the large cake were souvenirs, which were the cause of much merriment and joking among the boys. Donald McColligan, Cecil Brownell and Fred Brownell helped to serve the cake. The house was prettily decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. Games, child, they'd kill him," "But they didn't."

passed much too quickly. Mr. and Mrs. Burgess were heartily thanked by the guests for their hospitality.
