ENGLISH LADY IN MONTREAL ON WAY HOME FROM RUSSIA

After an experience of Russian conditions in war-time and during the revolutionary upheaval, Lady Muriel Paget arrived in Montreal yesterday, on her way home to England. She was accompanied by a number of nursing sisters and others of British birth, who had become stranded in Russia by the fortunes of war. Picton Bagge, who had held a consular post in Odessa, was also with the party. Lady Muriel Paget organized the Anglo-Russian hospital in London, and it was established first in Petrograd in the palace of the Grand Duke Demetri. There were two field hospitals, as well as an automobile column of twenty-six cars. It was most complete, and representative of the whole British Empire. In fact, last summer the field hospital had two Canadian officers, Major Hunt and Capt. McDermott, and several Canadian sisters, including Sister Cotton, daughter of General Cotton. It was organized in 1915, and began work in 1916. As Lady Muriel was ill in the beginning, Lady Sybil Grey went over with it for a time. Lady Muriel, next over when General Brusiloff was in command in the south. There was a terrible time of carnage just then. There were 60,000 wounded Russians in one week. The Red Cross unit worked exceedingly well under exceptionally difficult conditions. There was not nearly enough material for the work, and from the time of the Galician retreat there was only one surgeon to 4,000 wounded. The Anglo-Russian hospital had a field hospital working in Latak, 100 beds in all, and that hospital was raided every day by the Germans. Lady Muriel spoke highly of the fighting qualities of the Russians, and of their patience and fortitude under suffering. Their morale was excellent in the early years of the war. Lady Muriel said that when she returned to Russia last June, after spending some time in England, the whole situation was changed. There was no law or order anywhere. The hospital continued its work at Tarnopol and Camenitz-Podolsk. It was the only Red Cross unit on duty, and 5,000 wounded were handled in ten days. At that time trains were being filled with 1,000 wounded at a time and sent out without doctors, nurses and with the certainty that the wounded men would not be able to get food for forty-eight hours. Lady Muriel did not consider it surprising that the Russian soldier, after enduring such experiences as these, and having his untrained intelligence filled with pleasant visions of owning land according to the Bolshevik programme, should not want to go back to fight. Lady Muriel went to Kiev from Odessa, peace having been signed by Russia, and undertook relief work for the civil population on behalf of the Allied governments. Reading rooms were established so that soldiers returning from the front would see in their own

A FISH TRUST GETS GRIP ON CALIFORNIA

Several Cities Unite in a Movement to Put Trade Under Federal Control

Some of the municipalities on the Pacific coast have taken steps to put the fish industry under municipal control, considerable progress having been made in this respect by the cities of Seattle, Wash., and Portland, Ore., says a San Francisco story. The fish catch of California alone last year was valued at $15,000,000, and under a system of municipal state or federal control which is now being worked out it is planned greatly to increase the production and consumption of fish and to reduce the present prices from one-third to one-half. It is charged that the California state fish exchange law passed at the last session of the legislature, which gave to the state the ownership of all fish taken in waters under the jurisdiction of the state market director to fix maximum prices for fish, has not been effective in reducing prices. Pointing out the fact that the price of fish is about the same as that of beef and mutton and in some instances higher, and asserting that conditions of produc-

FALL OF BOLSHIEVKI A VITAL NECESSITY

Paris, May 10.—Vladimir Bourzoff, the famous Russian revolutionary, on arriving at Stockholm after a perilous journey through Finland, said, according to dispatches from a correspondent at Stockholm, that the fall of the Maximists was a most vital necessity for Russia as at present only a newly organized government was capable of saving Russia. It must be composed of democrats and cadets, either under the presidency of Millukoff or a man like Kerenski. Only under such a government will peace with Ukraine be possible and the struggle against Germany will be resumed by both Bourzoff and Kerenski, declaring it was his feeblest wish which delivered the country into the hands of the Maximists, and praised Kerenski, against whom Kerenski declared war. Bourzoff is coming to Paris in three weeks, where he will resume publication of the newspaper he edited before the revolution. His programme will be the overthrow of the Maximists, and, following this, the resumption of hostilities against Germany.

BULGARIANS TO THE WESTERN FRONT

Paris, May 10.—A special Zurich dispatch to Le Journal says the Norddeutscher Allgemeine Zeitung gives prominence to news of a conference which took place on Thursday and Friday last at the German headquarters between Crown Prince Boris of Bulgaria, Emperor William, Col. Gatscher, Bulgarian Military Attaché to Berlin, Hindenburg and Ludendorff. A discussion took place on the subject of military aid by Bulgaria on the western front. Prince Boris, the Journal learns, has been especially charged to negotiate with Germany on this subject. Hindenburg and Ludendorff were decorated with high Bulgarian orders. Boris departed for the western front with the German and Bulgarian Crown Princes.
